Jack London's Prophecy
How Strikes Are Broken
Diamond in Her Tooth

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

FIFTEEN YEARS ago, Jack London, able young magazine writer, who thought he was a revolutionist, wrote "The Dream of Debs," describing an imaginary general strike in San Francisco.

He showed the "wealthy fighting over meat," telegraphers refusing to carry any messages except those "relating to peace terms" in connection with the strike, told how the working class remained happy, well fed and quiet at home, while "millionaires and paupers fought side by side for food, and then fought with one another after they got it."

It is not like that in San Francisco, where, with the general strike a reality, citizens take good naturedly the conditions and inconveniences. Strikers promise to "protect patients in twenty-three hospitals," and allow doctors to have gasoline. They have stopped ferryboats running between Oakland and San Francisco, very inconvenient for those that would like to cross.

Strike sympathizers say, "Citizens should submit to the necessary conditions and help the strikers in their efforts."

What would these sympathizers say if employers, instead of strikers, had shut down the ferries and told the people, "You may eat in nineteen of the three thousand restaurants in San Francisco, and at no others?"

There are various ways of dealing with strikes, when those in power wish to end them. In France, Briand, head of the government, himself a radical and Socialist, did not approve the strike on French railways. The majority of the strikers were still within the age of military service. Briand called them all out "to the colors" and put them on trains, not as strikers, but as soldiers. They were told to run those trains well, or be shot for military insubordination. They ran the trains.

The Chicago Pullman strike of 1894 started in May, spread to interstate commerce, affecting nearly all the railroads running out of Chicago.

Eugene Debs, in charge of the strike, acted with great energy. Interstate transportation of foodstuffs in several Western States was hindered, and United States marshals were pushed aside by the strikers. Grover Cleveland, then President, sent United States troops to Chicago, although Governor Altgeld had not requested federal assistance.

Debs announced, "The first shot fired at the strikers will precipitate revolution, and civil war."

The United States government indicted Debs. Several, including strikers, sympathizers and bystanders, were shot and killed by United States troops. Thousands of railroad cars were burned by strikers. Cleveland, in a proclamation, warned that law enforcement had broken down, and all lending aid or encouragement to strikers after three o'clock on the afternoon of July 10 would be dealt with as public enemies. On July 10 Debs was arrested. On the 11th the strike broke.

The same Grover Cleveland, you will remember, settled a difficulty with England concerning Venezuela in short order. It would be interesting to know what he would do if he were here now, in connection with the British debt.

The wise merchant tells his

INCREASE IN ACCIDENTS BLAMED

Practicall every motorist in the state is faced with higher compulsory automobile insurance rates next year, the state department of insurance disclosed today.

Final figures have not been completed, but department officials say that higher rates are inevitable as a result of sharp increases in fatal and personal injury accidents in 1933.

ALL ZONES AFFECTED

In virtually every one of the 20 zones for passenger automobiles and the seven commercial vehicle zones higher rates are expected to be levied.

As in the past, the rates will be based essentially on losses sustained by the insurance companies during the five years preceding January 1 of the current year.

Thee increased amount of loss damages which have to be taken into consideration by the insurance department in figuring next year's rates is illustrated by the sharp spurt in accident cases during the five year period from 1929 to 1933 as compared with 1928 to 1932.

ACCIDENTS LISTED

There was a total of 239,036 fatal and personal injury accidents recorded at the registry during the last five years.

There were 232,934, or approximately 7102 less cases in the previous five-year period. In addition, numerous personal injury cases were reported to the insurance department which have not appeared on the registry records.

Officials declined to estimate what the prospective jump in rates will amount to next year or to speculate as to what zones will be hit the hardest.

Son Hauls Father Off Live Wire

A son's presence of mind to pull the prostrate form of his father off high tension wires onto a roof of the building they were painting today, probably saved the life of Alexander St. Cyr, 48, of 52 Florence street, Roslindale.

With his parent, Hervey St. Cyr was at work on a three-story building at the corner of Highland avenue and Cedar street, Somerville.

As the older man attempted to throw a rope around the cupola of the dwelling he fainted and his body fell across the high tension wires leading into the building.

Hervey hauled his father's body away from the electrically charged wires, and after placing him in prone position on the roof, summoned help from Ladder 4 of the Somerville fire department.

At the Somerville Hospital the injured man was found to be suffering from burns of the chest, right foot and right hand.

LANGER OUSTER DEFIED BY GUNS

Bismarck, N. D., July 18—Defying the State Supreme Court order ousting him from the governorship, William A. Langer today declared martial law in North Dakota and clung to his office.

Authorities were fearful that violence would result from the turbulent political situation.

His decision to order out National Guardsmen was reached last night, a few hours after the Supreme Court, by a vote of four to one, ordered Langer removed from office, and declared Lieutenant-Governor Ole H. Olson his successor.

Langer announced that his call for the militia was made "to prevent bloodshed and rioting."

CONNOR BABY GAINING IN LIFE FIGHT

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Hartsdale, N. Y., July 18—Bobbie Connor, 21 months old baby, who played a junior Robinson Crusoe in a thicket for five days, appeared to be making a winning fight for life today.

Under treatment of medical specialists for exposure, hunger and thirst, a hospital bulletin reported Bobby as improving and showing no alarming symptoms.

The bulletin, issued by Dr. Claude W. Munger, superintendent of Grasslands Hospital, read:

Bobby Connor

"Temperature, 99; pulse, 120 per minute; respiration, 28 per minute. Child appears to be strong, is quite restless this morning. No alarming symptoms. Is receiving feeds of skimmed milk and Dextro-Maltose."

With the virtual elimination by authorities of their original theory of kidnaping, the recovery of the lost Bobby Connor created public wonderment as to how a baby could survive the elements and the lack of food and drink for almost 120 hours.

Bobby Connor may lay claim to

2 FLEE BULLETS IN POLICE RACE

After a chase into Billerica, during which several shots were fired, an Arlington police cruising car was outdistanced today by a stolen sedan in which two men rode.

Shots fired by the police failed to halt the auto thieves who stepped on the gas and, pushing their car up to 70 miles an hour, eluded their pursuers.

Officers Thomas Curran and John Hourihan spotted the stolen car while they were in the police car in Massachusetts avenue.

Bentz Questioned on Big Bay State Holdups

Portland, Me., July 18—Several unsolved Massachusetts bank robberies were injected today into the grilling of Theodore Bentz, alias Craig, suspect held for a Vermont bank robbery and on suspicion of connection with the Lindbergh and Urschel kidnapings.

Snatched away from a novelty manufacturing business, allegedly used as a blind for his criminal activities, Bentz is under shotgun guard against a possible jail rescue attempt by the fugitive gang, led by his brother.

The Brookline Trust robbery, the holdup of the Wollaston branch of the Quincy Trust, bank holdup at North Easton, Mass., and the robbery of the Crocker National Bank at Turners Falls, Mass., were crimes about which Bentz was questioned by Department of Justice agents from Boston.

His brother, Eddie Bentz, who fled this city two weeks ago with three of his gang, has been sought for the Turners Falls robbery since last April.

Although tracked down by a Gardner,Mass., policeman at whom he laughed, Bentz apparently lost none of his "big shot" ideas and refused to answer the questions of local police, making his only statements to Clarence D. McKean, De-

LABOR CHIEF 'DISOWNS' WALKOUT; REDS HELD

By Associated Press

By Associated Press

San Francisco, July 18—An arbitration proposal gave new hope today to San Francisco and the other strike-prostrated bay cities.

The general strike committee called on opposing forces in the Pacific Coast maritime dispute for a "showdown," voting to arbitrate differences and send all strikers back to work as soon as shipowners agree to recognize the maritime unions.

Though the proposal failed to forecast specifically an end to the general walkout of nearly 100,000 union workers, which has paralyzed the normal service to 1,300,000 people of the metropolitan area, it was quickly hailed as a possible way out of the demoralizing crisis.

The resolution, adopted by the committee by a vote of 207 to 180 after seven hours of debate, followed increasing tension as 30,000 East Bay workers joined in the walkout and raids and riots struck the region.

STRIKE PEACE UP TO SHIPOWNERS; U. S. MAY ARBITRATE

300 REDS HELD; GOVERNOR FEARS PUBLIC UPRISING

200 RADICALS HELD

More than 300 alleged radicals were rounded up by police while self-styled vigilante groups stormed known Communist headquarters.

National guardsmen, in control of the San Francisco waterfront and touring the East Bay cities in squads, aided hard-pressed police in guarding the beleaguered region.

Increasing evidence of Federal concern over the spreading strike was seen as Hugh Johnson, NRA administrator, branded the general strike a "bloody insurrection" in an address at Berkeley and F. A. Donaghue, chief examiner of the new National Labor Reference Board, arrived by plane from Washington.

United States Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, author of the original labor disputes bill, hurried to Portland, Ore., where a general strike threat was held back by a union "strategy" committee pending action he may take.

After his arrival at Portland, Wagner conferred with Governor Julius L. Meier and said he had no program outlined, explaining:

"I am never reticent, but I think this is a matter which talk will not help."

LABOR LEADER COLLAPSES

The San Francisco general strike committee's "peace" call came from a turbulent meeting of the members at Labor Temple, at which John A. O'Connell, secretary of the Central Labor Council, collapsed and was taken to his home in a serious condition.

In its resolution stating the offer, the strike committee called upon the 27,000 marine and dock workers of the coast to submit to arbitration by a federal board appointed by President Roosevelt.

Employers likewise were asked to place issues in dispute in the hands of the President's board and the entire proposal was made contingent upon employer recognition of all the 19 maritime unions whose strike has crippled shipping since May 8.

The longshoremen's demand for complete control of hiring agencies, which has been a stumbling block in mediation attempts, was not mentioned in the resolution. Maritime union members of the committee came from the meeting obviously angry, and Harry Bridges, the longshoremen's militant representative, declared the proposal "will never be accepted by the men."

Immediate consideration today of the olive-branch offer by waterfront and shipping employers, however, was announced by Thomas G. Plant, their authorized spokesman.

The President's mediation board, now preparing to conduct an election among striking seamen for the purpose of determining what leaders shall represent them, also will meet on the matter, O. K. Cushing, spokesman for the board, said.

UP TO SHIPOWNERS

Edward Vandeleur, president of the Central Labor Council and chairman of the general strike committee, said:

"Labor has done its part. The matter rests entirely with the shipowners now."

The resolution urged the governors of California, Oregon and Washington and the mayors of all cities affected by the widespread conflict to "immediately appeal to the President of the United States to act in this emergency."

Members of the general strike committee declined to comment on their possible course should arbitration be rejected. Conservative members indicated, however, that they believed the maritime unions, if they refused consent, would lose general strike backing and that the employers, in the event of failure to accept the offer, would lose public support.

The wave of walkouts extended to Seattle, where union boilermakers voted 222 to 48 for "sympathy" action in support of the maritime workers. Seattle machinists voted 76 to 32 for a "sympathetic walkout," but I. A. Sandvigen, business agent, said this was five short of the necessary majority.

Governor Clarence D. Martin of Washington urged "all citizens who are primarily interested in the public welfare to join in expression" against general strikes, which he asserted, could not be won.

BOYCOTT IS DECLARED

At Spokane, a boycott on all business with California concerns until troops are removed from the San Francisco strike area was announced by the Central Labor Council through Albert Leslie, secretary.

The police and "Vigilante" raids against the alleged Communists in the San Francisco region brought a promise from District Attorney Matthew Brady that efforts would be made to have all radical aliens caught in the roundup deported.

Dozens of men were injured, four arrested and scores scattered in a street flareup last night which occurred as police attempted to disperse crowds listening to an assorted Communist orator. The most seriously injured was a bystander whose shoulder was broken as he was knocked down and trampled by the fleeing crowd. The four jailed included two United States soldiers, Royal Grandee and Harold Fish, who, police charged, refused to "move on."

In Oakland and Berkeley mobs threatened four restaurants opened by the East Bay Citizens' emergency committee, but police squads arrived before any of the establishments were damaged.

FEAR PUBLIC ANGER

While declaring no lessening of the general strike in the East Bay cities was planned, William H. Spooner, secretary of the Alameda County Labor Council, said the actions of the San Francisco strike committee were being watched closely. He intimated that the East Bay unions would follow the lead of their embattled fellow workers across the bay.

Belief that strikers may need protection "from the fury of citizens" unless the mass walkout in the bay region, now in its third day here, is ended was expressed by acting Governor Frank F. Merriam of California. He said:

"Three hundred men in Oakland wanted to arm themselves and go after the strikers. I am not going to advocate anything like that but I feel the people have a right to exercise the spirit that marked the activities of their forefathers and determine these questions for themselves. In such an event the state will have to protect the strikers as well as the other elements."

Street car service, stopped in Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley early yesterday, remained at a standstill. In San Francisco only cars of the municipal railway, representing but about one-fourth of the city's normal traction service, were running. Large sections of the city still were without any service as the two privately-owned systems remained tied up.

Food Rioters Strip Grocery Store Clean of Stock

Meats and groceries went over the counter minus payment when a mob of hoodlums numbering more than 1000 looted the grocery store shown in the picture above. All that was left of the food stock was a lot of empty crates and boxes by the time riot squads of San Francisco police answered an emergency call.

Radicals Flee Mob's Fury

By Associated Press

San Francisco, July 18—The Communist forces which, according to many reports, flocked into this city last week in preparation for the mass strike were somewhat driven to cover today.

A series of raids, mostly by unidentified persons but followed up by police, had wrecked half a dozen "Red" centers. The climax came last night when a street orator's crowd at Fillmore and Eddy streets was broken up with injuries to a dozen or more persons. Three arrests were made.

In the previous raids scores were arrested and considerable propaganda material was seized or destroyed, particularly by the unofficial raiders.

National guard troops aided in some raids, using trucks to block streets while attacks were in progress.

Moves against radical groups also were reported from San Jose, Richmond and other Bay points.

1000 Poor Children Will Have Outing

Roxbury's underprivileged children are the envy of their more well-to-do contemporaries these days, the reason being the second annual outing of the Brunswick Civic Club on August 5 to which they have been invited. It will take place at Houghton's Pond, Milton.

Last year 600 of Roxbury's poor children attended the outing. More than 1000 will be guests of the Brunswick Civic Club this year, according to David Sandler, outing chairman.

New York, July 18 (INS)—Federal Judge Carroll C. Hincks today denied a motion to dismiss the indictment against William J. Graham and James C. McKay, Reno, Nev., club owners and John J. Eggleston of Worcester, Mass., who have been on trial for two weeks on a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with a race track swindle.

MINE STRIKE IN SOUTH OVER

Birmingham, Ala., July 18—The strike of red ore miners, which took 8000 men away from the mines and cost two lives, was at an end today but the situation in the textile strike remained virtually unchanged, with 15,000 workers out.

The mine strike ended when workers at the Raimund mines returned to their jobs. They had been out since May 8.

A contract providing pay increases of 2 to 5 cents an hour and reclassification of certain workers was signed by representatives of the Republic Steel Corporation and the United Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

C. L. Richardson, Department of Labor conciliator who worked for settlement of the strike, planned to leave immediately for Columbia, S. C., to negotiate for a settlement of a dispute there.

Union leaders in the textile strike had announced that 22,000 workers would be affected by the walkout but only an estimated 15,000 people were out.

Mediation Begins in Kohler Company Strike

First efforts toward settling the strike of members of the American Federation of Labor Union were started under the direction of the Rev. J. W. Maguire, Kankakee, Ill., a member of the Chicago Regional Labor Board.

Arbitration Vote Passed in Effort to End Strike

By International News Service

San Francisco, July 18—Highlights of the third day of the disastrous general strike in San Francisco and East Bay cities.

MOVE TO END STRIKE—The San Francisco labor council's general strike committee voted 207 to 180 vigorously urging longshoremen and other striking marine workers to submit their grievances to arbitration by President Roosevelt's mediation board and abide by the board's decision. The general strike is a direct result of the walkout on May 9 of 20,000 Pacific Coast marine workers and the failure of employers and shippers to reach an agreement.

GENERAL HUGH JOHNSON, NRA chief, "cracks down" on shippers and strikers alike, declaring general walkout "civil war."

SENATOR ROBERT F. WAGNER of New York arrives in Portland by plane and immediately confers with Governor Meier of Oregon and calls meeting with labor leaders.

ON STRIKE—140,000 on Pacific Coast, 127,000 of whom are concentrated in San Francisco Bay area.

FOOD—Trucks loaded with lettuce, tomatoes and other fresh vegetables convoyed under heavy guard from interior and Northern California farming regions, greatly alleviating food situation in San Francisco.

MEAT—Fresh meat supply exhausted two days ago.

TRANSPORTATION—Municipal street car system operating over one-third of city's lines. Two other systems—Market street and cable lines—still tied up.

RESTAURANTS—32 additional eating places open under permission of strike committee, bringing total restaurants to 69 catering to 700,000 San Francisans.

Pie and Happy Days Return

By International News Service

San Francisco, July 18—Happy days are here again, in San Francisco. Pie is back.

Its return was a symbol, an evil force that the general strike restrictions definitely had been lessened.

Pie was one of the first "staples" to be dropped from the "permit" cafe menus. Today there was ample pie on hand for all demands—mostly raisin, it was true, but nevertheless it was pie.

Similarly, greenstuffs began to be available.

Great Britain to Double Air Force

London, July 18 (AP)—The finishing touches today were put on Great Britain's plans to double her air force at a cabinet meeting.

It was understood that the cabinet agreed on an increase of at least 50 squadrons during a period of years. When such extension should be completed Great Britain would have an air force equal to any nation "within striking distance."

Minneapolis, July 18—A new federal move to settle the strike of union truck drivers began today.

Father Francis J. Haas, a member of the federal labor relations board, who helped negotiate a peaceful end to Milwaukee's recent electric strike, was en route from Washington in a government plane to settle the drivers' walkout, which has halted virtually all truck traffic in Minneapolis.

The mediator is expected here late today by airplane to assist E. H. Dunnigan, labor department conciliator, and Governor Floyd B. Olson in their efforts to arbitrate the matter.

National guardsmen were in readiness in the downtown district to stop any disorders.

Striking union workers toured the downtown streets in cars, but with few trucks moving, there was little occasion for disorder. Newspaper, gasoline and milk and market gardeners' trucks were exempt in the tie-up, which began at midnight Monday.

Pope Blesses 40 U. S. Navy Cadets

Rome, July 18 (AP)—Pope Pius, speaking to another group of American sailors, today paid homage to the sea as an "unsurpassable teacher." Before addressing 400 midshipmen His Holiness received Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, who is in command of American war vessels making a training cruise in European waters, and the American officer's staff. The PoPpe imparted an apostolic benediction onthe sailors.

300 JAILED AS RADICALS ARE RAIDED

By Universal Service.

San Francisco, July 17—Every known Communist headquarters and meeting place in San Francisco was raided and wrecked. Four persons were beaten.

Three of the raids were official. There were carried out by angry citizens. More than 300 men were jailed as vagrants. One of the men injured was a policeman.

The three unoffical raids were staged by about 20 young men, said to be members of the Teamsters' Union.

The first demonstration took place on Fillmore street when the raiders swooped up in three fast cars, leaped out with hatchets, clubs and stones in their hands and swarmed into the place.

Here two men, believed by police to have resisted the infuriated attackers, were badly hurt.

As all other occupants of the headquarters scuttled out rear doors, the raiders went to work enthusiastically. Furniture fell to pieces under splintering hatchet blows. Pictures and Communistic placards crashed from the walls. Rocks sailed through the windows. Literature was torn up and scattered like confetti.

Uproar of the riot attracted a throng of sightseers that decamped hastily as the raiders, whooping challenges to "Reds," emerged from the shables. Before police arrived they were out of sight.

While some 75 assorted officers in radio cars and patrol wagons gathered, the second riot broke out on Haight street. Working with the same efficient gusto, the raiders wrecked the place and again escaped before police arrived.

COURT PROBE LOOMS IN DIVORCE GIVEN MRS. MCADOO

20 MINUTE DECREE UNDER FIRE IN LOS ANGELES

Attorney Defends Action as Legal; Senator and Wife Parted by Capital Weather

Los Angeles, July 18—The divorce of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo and Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, daughter of the late President Wilson, faced an inquiry today by presiding Judge Frank C. Collier of the superior court.

Mrs. McAdoo was granted the divorce by Superior Judge Allan B. Campbell in a hearing lasting about five minutes yesterday—within 20 minutes after she filed suit. Judge Collier said:

"It would be possible for a complaint to be filed and go through the regular processes in the time which this action took, but I want to know that all the processes were duly followed in the case."

Judge Collier said his investigation "will not void the decree."

The Washington weather and differences of interest were blamed by Mrs. McAdoo for the divorce, obtained on grounds of incompatibility. Mrs. McAdoo said:

"As a senator, Mr. McAdoo is obliged to spend the larger part of each year in Washington. The climate does not agree with me and it is impossible for me to live there. I have and always shall have the greatest admiration and affection for Mr. McAdoo."

The senator, who did not contest the action, said she "correctly stated the reasons for the separation."

The court approved a property settlement, which was not made public, and awarded custody of the children, Eleanor, 19, and Faith, 14, to Mrs. McAdoo.

Henry Grivl, attorney for Mrs. McAdoo, said:

"Each step was taken according to the rules of court and law. Under the rules it could have been done even faster. If Judge Collier wants to investigate, he is perfectly at liberty to do so."

Senator McAdoo is 70 years old; Mrs. McAdoo, 43. Mr. McAdoo's first wife, Sarah Fleming McAdoo, died in 1913.

The romance of Senator and Mrs. McAdoo began within the White House itself. It was there they met, soon after Mr. McAdoo had gone to Washington as a member of President Wilson's official family.

The marriage of the lovely Eleanor Wilson and the brilliant, distinguished secretary of the treasury was one of Washington's most glamorous functions. It took place in 1914 and was attended by officialdom, diplomacy and society.

Few indeed are the love stories with a White House background; and the union of the President's daughter and McAdoo was thought to be the ideal climax to a courtship watched by the entire nation.

Their marriage was solemnized in the White House. The bride's mother, who was to die less than two years later, watched fondly at the side of the President as the words uniting William Gibbs McAdoo and Eleanor Wilson were pronounced.

SPEED CRAZED PAIR IN DEATH CAR HUNTED

Police were without a clue today to the pair of speed-crazed automobile thieves who caused a man's death and injuries to eight other persons in Washington street, Roslindale, during the night.

The victims included John Wallace, 63, of Iffley road, Jamaica Plain, who was killed outright; Mrs. May Doran, 56, of Milton avenue, Dorchester; another woman and six firemen. The last group was working on a dump fire.

STEPPING OFF CAR

Wallace met death as he stepped across the reservation to meet a Roslindale-bound street car, operated by Mark Carr of Washington street, Roslindale. The stolen machine drove him right into the path of the trolley.

As Operator Carr brought the 61 car to a stop, passengers made a rush for the street and two of them were struck by the speeding machine. Mrs. Doran sustained a fractured hip and internal injuries and had to be sent to City Hospital.

The firemen caught in the path of the speedsters were bruised painfully. Their injuries were caused when the car ran over and dragged along a fire hose laid across Washington street.

FAINLY CHASED

The race began when Patrolman John J. McGrath of West Roxbury division saw two suspicious-looking youths get into the automobile at Beech and Washington streets, Roslindale. They headed towards Dedham.

The officer commandeered a car and gave chase. It took nearly an hour to extricate the fatality victim of the chase from beneath the wheels of thetrolley.

June Near Collapse at Morals Trial

June De Long, flaxen-haired film "extra," was back in a Los Angeles court today, ready to continue her testimony about the alleged "Babylonian orgy" which is said to have been carried on in her apartment by a casting director and another "extra girl." Necessity of revealing all the details of the wild party almost caused Miss De Long to col'apse in court. She is shown slumped over the counsel table. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

MUSIC OF RADIO ENTERS FILM MORALS TRIAL

Los Angeles, July 18—Mrs. Pearl Owings was recalled to the stand in the "Hollywood morals" trial to give additional testimony concerning her intrusion into the apartment of June De Long last April 26 during what she said was an immoral "party" involving Miss De Long, Dave Allen and Gloria Marsh.

Mrs. Owings, a friend of Miss De Long, asserted she was unable to "recall" whether a radio was playing in Miss De Long's apartment as she knocked on the door, then, receiving no answer, walked in at the height of the alleged "Babylonian" orgy, which she previously had described in detail from the witness stand.

ASKED ABOUT RADIO

She was asked:

"You know, Mrs. Owings, that Miss De Long has testified she did not hear your knock because the radio was turn on, don't you?"

"No."

"Haven't you read June De Long's testimony in the newspapers?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you read that part of her testimony concerning the radio?"

"I don't recall."

"FRAMING" CHARGED

The defense contends Allen was framed by persons seeking to obtain his dismissal as manager of the Central Casting Corporation, agency which handles Hollywood's 17,000 "extra" film players. Allen and Miss Marsh are on trial.

Mrs. Owings admitted on cross-examination that she once called on a deputy district attorney, Eugene Blalock, for legal advice concerning a home owners' loan.

She denied, however, she was introduced to him as the wife of Pat Harman, motion picture "heavy," who appeared as a state's witness.

But the good suffer with the bad and no one is allowed on the beach after 10 p. m. unless a permit has been issued by the chief of police. The permit must be renewed daily.

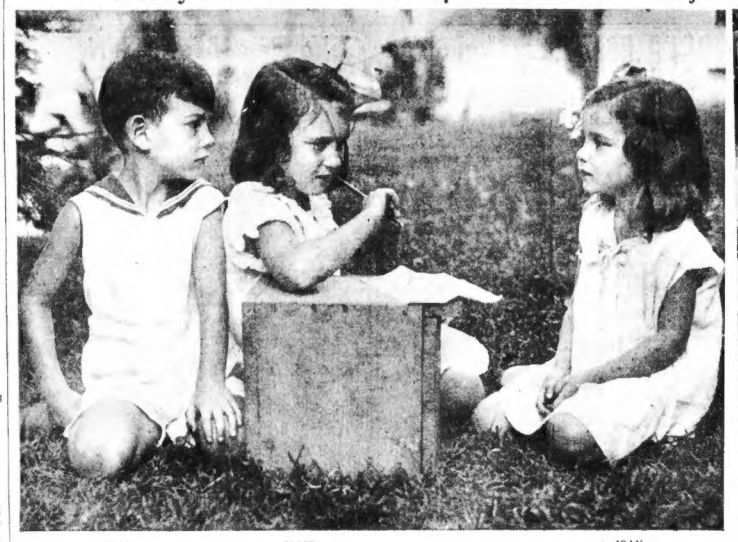
Bobby Bundled Off to Hospital as Children Rejoice at His Safe Return



DICK CLAIR JOAN

Just as Dick, Clair and Joan Connor, brother and sisters of kidnaped Bobby Connor, of Hartsdale, N. Y., were about to pen a note to his kidnapers pleading for the lad's release, word was received by them of his return home to safety. This picture of the Connor trio was snapped at the home of their maternal grandmother at Bridgeport, Ct., where they were taken for safety after the disappearance of Bobby. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Weak and emaciated and in a semi-stave condition, little Bobby Connor, bundled in blankets, is shown above as he was rushed to a hospital for treatment after he had been found in the woods near his home. His mother, ill for days during the hunt, collapsed when word was received that the child was safe. Bobby's condition was reported as "very good" at the hospital today.

2-WAY RADIO FOR QUINCY

Quincy today became the first city in New England and the eleventh in the United States to have a two-way radio-equipped police department.

In the presence of Mayor Charles A. Ross, Chief of Police Ernest H. Bishop and citizens, the new system was officially given over to the police department by the Radio Engineering Laboratories, Inc., of Long Island, New York.

The station will be known as WIXBL, broadcasting 40,000 kilocycles and wave length of 7.4 meters.

Six police cars have been equipped—three coupes, two sedans and a patrol wagon.

Coupes and sedans will cruise about the city day and night.

The first official message broadcast was by Lieutenant George Cahill who sent car No. 5 to ruins of the general alarm fire at the Peerless Granite works which last night caused $40,000 damage. Through the ether went the message that children were playing in the ruins.

CONNOR BABY GAINS IN LIFE BATTLE

being the toughest baby in the world. This junior Tarzan also takes his place among the great adventurers of 1934.

It was at 6 p. m. last Thursday that Bobby tired of his sandpile and set forth on an exploratory voyage, which kept the nation in suspense for five days.

He toddled westward, where all true pioneers head, toward the unknown. The spot in the underbrush where the baby was found is about half a mile from a paved highway. Perhaps Bobby took to the broad highway and then cut into the jungle to see what he could see.

The distance from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Connor, is only one-half mile in a direct line, but it is probable that Bobby toddled twice as far before he collapsed in a space shaded by the junction of two stone walls.

WEATHER AIDED

The fact that Bobby was found alive in his jungle retreat was probably due to a benevolent stretch of weather. A checkup by International News Service of the weather conditions prevailing during his five-day absence showed that the temperature only averaged 74.3 degrees with a life-saving rainstorm occurring midway in the period of his wanderings.

Dr. Munger, superintendent of Glasslands Hospital, agreed that the heavy rain on Sunday probably had kept the child alive. Enough rain water had entered the pores of the baby's skin so that it prevented dehydration and made up partially for the lack of drinking water.

OTHER SHOE FOUND

Bobby's second shoe was found today in the clearing by state troopers. The sock was carefully put into the little shoe which was put away in a chink in the stone wall. The other shoe and sock were found in the clearing yesterday.

Captain Christopher Kemmler, commander of the state troopers, said the position of the shoe led him to believe that Bobby had taken off the shoes himself. Real adventurers go barefooted.

The parents of Bobby, when not visiting their baby in the hospital, are staying at an unrevealed residence in order to avoid the crowd of curious tourists, who have motored to the Connor home since news of the baby's recovery was given to the world.

Bobby who was found a half mile from his home yesterday in a partially starved condition, wandered about the thicket for five days, unseen by numerous searching parties which were supposed to have scoured every square inch of ground within a five-mile radius of the Connor home, the police admitted.

Until medical opinion was sought, the officers in charge of the search held to the belief that the child was a victim of kidnapers and that he had been placed at the spot where he was found within 24 hours of his discovery.

Dr. Claude W. Munger, superintendent of the Grasslands Hospital in White Plains, who has the child in charge, blasted this theory, however, and declared emphatically that Bobby had been wandering alone in the woods since his disappearance Thursday.

Dr. Munger said that the condition of Bobby, whose official weight on the hospital chart was 18 pounds, 11 ounces, as compared with between 25 and 30 pounds before he vanished, was that of a "famine baby." Dr. Munger said.

"After a consultation with physicians throughout Westchester county, the consensus is that he could have lived alone in the woods if he had had water," said Dr. Munger. "I talked to his mother and she told me he was smart enough to drink water if it came to him. The other way he could get water was by absorption. The rainstorm last Sunday night might have supplied him both ways.

"I do believe the child lived that long alone in the woods, and I base that belief on his extremely dehydrated condition."

Bobby's body was covered with bruises and scratches, but he suffered no other injuries.

WANDERINGS MYSTERY

Just how the child escaped detection by the hundreds of searchers who combed the wooded area near his home ever since his disappearance was noted, apparently must forever remain a mystery.

Frank Fay, agent of the the Department of Justice, announced the end of the Federal investigation in a statement in which he said it had been established that Bobby simply wandered from home.

Police Chief Philip McQuillan said he concurred in Faye's statement.

LIVED ON GRASS

The federal agents' statement quoted the opinions of Dr. Munger and staff physicians of Grasslands Hospital that the child could have survived the five days—without water or food in the woods.

At the hospital it was determined that Bobby had eaten quantities of grass.

Bobby gained a pound and 13 ounces last night after being given a quart of glucose and water.

Policeman Dunckel explained that he and Hogan found the child by looking "where nobody else had looked." They carried Bobby to a police car and, with siren going, raced to the Connor home.

"My baby! Oh, my baby!" cried Mrs. Connor when they brought her her child.

Then she collapsed and Bobby was rushed to the hospital, accompanied by his father.

PEDLAR RELEASED

Harry Lee Forestier, the pedlar detained for possible connection with the child's disappearance, was released last night.

"He sleeps considerably," said a bulletin issued at the hospital, "and when awake seems brighter. There is a slight bruise in the middle of the forehead about an inch square."

Paris, July 18 (INS)—Francois Coty, French perfumery millionaire and former owner of the newspaper Le Matin, was reported critically ill today. Physicians diagnosed the condition as due to cerebral congestion.

Bobby's Vitality Amazing After Study of Elements

By International News Service

Hartsdale, N. Y., July 18—The amazing resistance of a tiny human being to the merciless forces of the elements was shown today in a study of the weather charts for the 5 days and nights that 21-months old Bobby Connor struggled alone in the woodlands near his home here.

Last Thursday, the day he disappeared, dawned bright and clear. The weather was fair and moderately warm, but the next day the humidity vaulted 34 degrees to 84, and in the stifling mugginess, which enervated older folks, the little baby played out his incredible adventure in the woods.

HUMIDITY HIGH

Saturday came, with a steady, moderate temperature, but again a high humidity. On Sunday the temperature mounted, and a broiling sun beat down on his little form, fast becoming pinched and emaciated through lack of food and water.

Throughout that day the mercury rose, reaching 89 degrees in the afternoon, while the humidity mounted to 100. And then a storm broke. Out of a black, low-hanging sky a violent electrical disturbance hurtled and the temperature dropped 25 degrees.

ONLY ROMPERS

And through this torrent, his tiny body protected only by a thin pair of summer rompers, Bobby's childish vitality preserved him.

The rainfall, which sent old folks scurrying for slickers or the protection of their home hearths, actually gave him new life—for he absorbed enough through the pores of his skin to compensate for his lack of liquid nourishment.

The skies cleared Sunday night and from that time on, smiled upon the human mite, struggling against odds that might have ended others older and bigger than he. There was no more rain and no more extremes of temperature or humidity—but they found him just in time.

Jewel-Tooth Death Victim Identified

Paulsboro, N. J., July 18 (AP)—The body of a young woman, a diamond set in a gold inlay of one of her teeth and a bruise on the back of her head, who fell dead on a Paulsboro street, was identified by relatives today as that of Mrs. Mabel Peterson, 29, of Williamsport, Pa. W. Clayton Apgar, chief of detectives, said the relatives told him she left home several days ago on an automobile tour with Robert Lynch, a boarder.

Man, Struck by Hit-Run, Dying

John Feheeni, 48, of Saratoga street, East Boston, is dying at Somerville hospital of concussion of the brain and internal injuries, suffered this morning when he was struck by a hit-and-run auto in Wilson square, Somerville.

Fanenti, an employe of the Boston & Maine Railway, was throwing a switch. The driver jumped from the car, which, police say, is owned by a florist, and was stolen.

OHIO KIDNAP NOTE TRACED

By International News Service

Columbus, Ohio, July 18—State highway patrolmen today were attempting to learn if a kidnap note found in the road near Delphos was authentic or was a child's prank.

On one side of the note was written:

"I am kidnaped—help."

The other side bore the name of Ruth Emelie Hadlock, 119 E. Huntington Park, Nichols, Conan, Investigation showed. Superintendent Lynn Black of the patrol said, that a Hadlock family resides at that address.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadlock and a 13-year-old daughter, Ruth Emelie left Nichols a suburb of Bridgeport, last week for a trip to Chicago, Connecticut authorities informed Colonel Black. Their friends have received no word from them since they left, Colonel Black was told.

DEBS STEP OUT IN STYLE TO LET STENOS FORGET IT AWHILE

CHARLOTTE T. CURTISS

Smart, gay, crisp summer things, modeled by society debs, cascaded over the pier at the Hingham Yacht Club in a style show staged for the benefit of the Y. W. C. A. Camp Winnecunnet. One of the hits of the display was this brown and white checked gingham worn by Miss Curtiss. Smart lines give it severe style, with the only embellishment just below the neck

DOROTHY WRIGHT

Printed cotton continues popular as demonstrated by Dorothy Wright's sports dress. It is trimmed in white and has pequet collars and cuffs. She wore it at the show with her friends to raise funds so that working girls might go to camp and forget all about style for a time while they rough it. Ellen Davis showed a smart thing of yellow tie silk with white shoulder buttons. Very smart for afternoons. A bit of a sportsy, masculine note was struck by the gay tattersall blouse and skirt ensemble of Elizabeth Wright. Red buttons add the sharp touch of simple decoraion—so much in vogue this season, when fluffy ruffles are so definitely out.

Ladies unite in their enthusiasm for flowered prints this season. Few finer ones have bee nseen than this printd linen afternoon dress of Elizabeth Bradley. Half Pig, Half Horse Is Born

By International News Service

Seneca Falls, N. Y., July 18.—A new freak for the side show world best described as half pig and half horse, became the talk of the town today, as Dr. W. L. Clark, a veterinarian, placed the animal on exhibition at his hospital.

This freak, born to a mare on a farm, has the head of a pig, breathes and snorts like a pig, but has the long legs and body of a colt. The animal is black, with white marks on its long, pointed head and nose.

clerks. "The customer is always right," James J. Dooling, new leader of Tammany Hall, tells those under him, the entire human machinery of the biggest city. "If public opinion is against anything, there must be changes, because public opinion is always right."

Mr. Dooling, as leader of Tammany, is very young, only 41. Tammany has always thought a leader should be over 50. Croker and Murphy were over 50. Some Tammany men feel that Mr. Dooling is "too highly educated." At Fordham College, he studied Greek and Latin as well as law.

Mr. Dooling's conspicuously broken nose is a souvenir of a football game played in his college days. Other important Tammany men have had broken noses, less justifiable.

Tammany insiders are interested in the fact that Mr. Dooling's victory means greatly increased power and glory for Mr. Eddie Ahearn. The fathers of both Mr. Dooling and Mr. Ahearn were Tammany leaders before them and the sons are not political amateurs.

At Paulsboro, N. J., a good-looking young woman, not identified, with red hair and a diamond set in one tooth, was found dying in the street after a brutal beating. She died without speaking.

Such an incident, in our crime days, is common enough, but the "diamond set in one tooth" interests reporters and detectives and will give the case publicity.

Fitzsimmons, genuine prize-fighter, had various diamonds set in his teeth, rejoiced in them, and pulled his mouth far to one side to show you those in the large back teeth.

Well-meant efforts of men often go wrong. Some one paid a German band to go to the entrance of the Tombs prison in New York and play "The Prisoner's Song" loudly for an hour "to cheer the prisoners." The band played just enough music to go with the words:

"If I had the wings of an angel,
O'er these cruel prison walls I would fly;
I'd go back to the arms of my darling,
And there I'd be will-ing to die."

Then came a furious noise, shaking of steel doors, howling and yelling from the 700 prisoners, and a keeper to say, "Get away from here before they push the front of the building on top of you."

It seems that real prisoners do not like the "Prisoner's Song" as much as sentimental ladies like it.

He will need all the "ruggedness" he can acquire to handle conditions when he returns.

From Ecuador, in South America, two "spectacled bears" arrive at New York's Bronx Zoo, which for nine years has had no spectacled bear. These interesting creatures, sisters, will live on boiled rice and molasses, have no general-strike-or-food-interference to fear, and will need their spectacles and all their intelligence to understand what is going on in this country.

Screen 'Morals Czar' O. K.'s 26 Films in Purity War

By Universal Service

Hollywood, July 18.—Film leaders proceeded briskly here with their housecleaning, a procedure construed by the motion picture industry as its most effective answer to the demands of churches and women's clubs for elimination of indecency in the cinema.

Joseph I. Breen, executive assistant to Will Hays, and the one-man "morals dictator" chosen to pass on all future releases, conferred the certificate of approval on 19 additional feature length pictures and seven short subjects.

Since the producers' own rigorous censorship was put into effect, less than a week ago, 44 features, 32 shorts and four serials have been adjudged morally worthy in every respect.

It is expected a meeting of the Producers' Association will be held the latter part of this week to review the cleanup work already accomplished and to make plans for futher efforts in this regard.

CENSORED CLUB TALE CAUSES AYER TALK

Ayer, July 18—In all the intriguing testimony presented at the hearing selectmen conducted for the purpose of revoking the Club Woodstock license, none caused more discussion today than the censored testimony of the "event in Paragraph 2."

"Paragraph 2" referred to testimony presented by Patrolman Ernest F. Downing of the Ayer police department. It concerned a back window peek by this officer that allegedly revealed a married man in a compromising position with another woman.

Details of this "peek" were impounded as far as the general meeting was concerned. Selectmen had little white slips passed around to them. Nobody knew whether or not the little white slips carried all the lurid details.

For all of that, the hearing is to go on tonight, and judging from the crowds that thronged the town hall last night, even a bigger gathering is anticipated for this evening at 7:30.

Practically the entire town turned out for the first hearing, packing the trial chamber, overflowing into the corridors and even resorting to listening at window and door vantage points.

Present was the principal in the whole performance, Mrs. Rena M. Richards, proprietress of the club, who has announced that, since she has thousands invested in the Woodstock, she will fight to a finish any move to revoke the club license.

'TELL ALL' DEMAND

The interesting testimony of "Paragraph 2" was censored, according to selectmen, "because here were women present." There was, however, a demand that witnesses "tell all."

The hearing opened over the protest of Mrs. Richards, who was represented by Attorney Edward I. Tierney of Lowell.

Only a few hours before, Mrs. Richards had been arraigned and pleaded not guilty in district court to operating with music and without a license therefor. Her case was continued for two weeks.

Attorney Tierney argued that the license hearing was being conducted without a fair basis in fact, he said:

"This is a tempest in a teapot. Revoking the license of this club now would be an injustice. There has been no violation of the law and this proceeding threatens the livelihood of persons who have invested their all in this club."

Six witnesses, who testified for the government, told of going into the club from time to time and seeing both men and women drinking up to as late as 5:45 a. m.

DRANK BEER STANDING

One of them was Herbert C. Richardson, special investigator for the State ABC Commission. He said that on the night of July 13 he went into the club and, with a companion, was served with two glasses of beer, although he was not sitting down while he drank part of the order.

Richardson told of seeing signs hanging over the bar advertising certain brands of liquor. This was a violation of club charter and license regulations, he said.

Corporal Robert E. Thompson of the Lunenberg barracks, state police, told of observations he had made.

Several times, he said, the place was open long after midnight, and on occasion, and after hours, an orchestra, or radio music, was going full blast.

Patrolman Downing, however, was the star witness, as far as the general audience was concerned. It was he who told of alleged "high jinks," fist fights, and the interesting events of "Paragraph 2."

Middlesex Tax Bills Jump 9 P. C.

Tax bills received by cities and towns in Middlesex county for the county tax for the current year show an advance over last year's totals, although it had been believed that they would show a substantial decrease this year. The increase is about 9 per cent. Increased highway construction work is largely responsible for the increase.

FATHER HELD AS GIRL 'AVENGER'

By International News Service

Hagerstown, Md., July 18—Allen Hollar, who refused to press charges against George Saum for seeking his daughter, Jane, pretty 16-year-old High school girl to Washington, today was under indictment for the murder of Saum.

The girl was found by Washington police after an extended search. Hollar readily agreed to the release of Saum who had been jailed during the hunt for the girl. A few hours later, it is charged, Hollar went to Saum's home and shot him to death.

Saum was married and father of three small children.

Haag dashed in and rescued her again. Mrs. Keough went back for more money while Haag followed her. The third rescue ended Haag's heroic efforts for the day.

COURT HOLDS FATE OF PONZI

By fighting his claims throughout the various United States courts, Charles Ponzi, one-time wizard of finance, hopes to obtain at least a year's stay against immigration proceedings that would deport him to Italy, it was revealed today.

Ponzi, for the moment, has met with a temporary setback, in that Judge Elisha H. Brewster has refused him bail, pending final decision on the Ponzi plea for a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge Brewster's decision backed up the argument of U. S. District Attorney Francis J. W. Ford. Ford asked that the court ban bail unless it consents to a discharge of the prisoner.

The actual petition for the habeas corpus was taken under advisement by Judge Brewster, although he indicated that he would arrive at a speedy decision. In the meantime, the court said, there was no authority to allow bail.

Ponzi's case is based on the claim that he is being deported for "moral turpitude," which involves two felonies. He asserts that his offense was one act, although he was prosecuted for violations of both state and federal laws.

The prisoner says that he will appeal any unfavorable decision by Judge Brewster to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. That body meets in October.

Ponzi presented his own case in federal court, although Attorney Peter V. Maggio, his counsel, was present and directed his client during the proceedings.

It was after Ponzi had argued his own case that he asked for bail. District Attorney Ford opposed, and Judge Brewster said that as much as he was inclined to set a bond, he had no authority for such a move.

Jobs Held Up in Absence of Ely

Due to the governor's departure for the governors' conference at Mackinac Island, Michigan, it is doubtful that any important appointments will be submitted at today's meeting of the executive council.

The offices left vacant by the resignations of General Charles H. Cole, as a public trustee of the Boston Elevated, and Edwin S. Smith, as state commissioner of labor and industries, are being sought by several prominent Democrats.

Astor's Bride Loves Twins, Movie Talk Reveals

By International News Service

New York, July 18—Blonde twins interest Mrs. John Jacob Astor if it was learned by accident, that came to light when a reporter happened to sit next to the former Ellen Tuck French and a girl friend in a movie theater.

When two dazzling twins well known to the stage, sat in front of Mrs. Astor, she exclaimed to her companion:

"Aren't they pretty? Whyhey are twins. I just love twin"

She wasn't at all the haughty Tuckyteen officially.

The film showed a triangular love story, with the star, Frau Morgan, being bored with each that never brought him happins.

Reporters played an iportant part. Mrs. Astor, who he showed indifference to live jornalists, evinced interest in the remote screen characters.

"They are amusing, h what awful pests when you me in contact with them," she nfided to her friend.

"I'm so happy, I shoi make a correction and say w are so happy," she whispered. If only the newspapers would op bothering us. I'm just goi to keep on ignoring them. I n't mean to be rude, but it is t self-defense!"

The bride of a millaire, Mrs. Astor's comment on weh was interesting. During the owing of the news reel, which showed a race horse, she said:

"He won $127,000! that could a horse do with all thmoney?"

As the program wcompleted, beautiful Tucky sighe

"I'm glad we ened the reporters. It is such a relief!"

Undaunted, the reporter, asserted himself. "Would Mrs. Astor forgive him, but when was she leaving for Newport?"

"This week," he hear her reply, before she realized the mistake.

CO-ED'S DEATH CAUSE SOUGHT

By Associated Press

Norman, Okla., July 18—The exact cause of the death of Marian Mills, former University of Oklahoma beauty queen, who died a week ago in the home of a fraternity cook, still baffled investigators today.

The cook, Mrs. Hazel Brown, held as a material witness, told authorities the girl had attempted to prevent motherhood with quack remedies.

Dr. Guy Y. Williams, professor of chemistry, said his tests would not be completed before Saturday.

County Attorney Paul Updegraff said the case could be cleared up quickly if Neal Myers, pharmacy student, sought for questioning, could be found.

Myers, traced to Houston last Thursday, has evaded pursuit, despite the plea of his father, El Reno physician, that he return.

THEATER GUILD GENIUS TO PRODUCE FILMS -:- RIALTO SEASON WILL OPEN AUGUST I

Theresa Helburn in Hollywood to Confer With Harry Cohn on Plans for Films

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service Inc.)

Los Angeles, July 18—Theresa Helburn, undisputed czarina of the New York theatrical world and dictator of the Theatre Guild, is becoming movie-minded. She is in Hollywood set for an appointment with Harry Cohn. She will discuss with him an offer to produce pictures for Columbia, and the plan is for her to head her own unit. Ivan Kahn is representing her.

If Miss Helburn can do for the movies what she has done for the theater, she will be a very valuable addition to Hollywood. She has, in the course of fifteen years, presented such playwrights as Shaw, O'Neill, Barry and Turgenev. She has sponsored such stars as Lynne Fontanne, Alfred Lunt, Helen Hayes, Eva Le Gallienne, all for the Theater Guild.

Mickey Mouse is going to visit Buckingham Palace, find himself in the House of Parliament and take a look at the Tower of London. His creator, Walter Disney, Mrs. Disney and the baby, leave next month to gather new ideas for Mickey and his pals. "The Three Little Pigs" are being left at home.

"I am going to put 'The Three Little Pigs' right out of my life," explained Mr. Disney. "I know I cannot make another film as good as the first. The second picture proved that conclusively—so I am in the market for a successor to the pigs and the big bad wolf."

You can't go against the old box office. That is the surest barometer in the world of what the public wants. Statistics proved that "Gold Diggers of 1933" was one of Warner Brothers' best money makers so Jack Warner is going to see if he cannot do a repeat by making a 1935 version of the "Gold Diggers" epic. The same cast, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Joan Blondell and Hugh Herbert will sing, dance and wisecrack. In fact, Jack is planning to make a "Gold Diggers" number every second year just as Ziegfeld did with the "Follies."

The sky's the limit with Nat Levine of Mascot Pictures for producing "The Crimson Romance," an aviation epic. Ben Lyon was the first to put his name on the dotted line and following him is Sari Maritza as the feminine lead. Eric Von Stroheim who will play the deep-dyed villain, Baron Von Richthofen; Hardie Albright, Billy Bakewell, Vince Barnett, Herman Bing and James Bush, are the lineup. Bush draws the second male lead and in case he is a stranger to you, you may be interested to know he comes from the New York stage.

A Line Or Two

Ask Edgar Selwyn and Eddie Mannix anything you want to know about crops. The two boys, coming home in a small plane from New York, landed right in the middle of a corn field in Ohio. All the farmers came to look at the two visitors from the sky and after a little negotiating, loaned them a car to ride to the nearest town. All I can say in that if David Selznick persuades Sidney Howard to play a part in "David Copperfield," England will rush to see the picture. Howard is to the British fans what Oliver Hardy and his boy friend, Stan Laurel, are to America. Sitting on top of the world is Maxine Doyle, who has had her old contract torn into bits with a new one with a higher salary presented to her. June Knight and Paul Ames are still cooing and billing. Any unpleasantness has been forgotten and forgiven. Sam Jaffe is headed for Hollywood to report to Samuel Goldwyn for Ann Sten's picture, "We Live Again" or "Resurrection," if you prefer that title.

'Life Begins at 8:40' Booked for Shubert

By George Holland

Here is the first bona fide theatrical news of the impending season from a Boston standpoint. In a wavery, uncertain fashion it was predicted last week under this same famous (ahem!) nomenclature (short for by-line) that "Life Begins at 8:40" would open the theatrical season at the Shubert theater. As memory serves, the preface was cagily couched in some such following equivocation: "More than a possibility, but far from a certainty, "Life Begins at 8:40" will open the Boston season at the Shubert theater, etc., etc."

Well, that is what is going to happen. "Life Begins at 8:40," a musical comedy along the pretentious, presented by the Messrs. Shubert, will open the Boston theatrical season on August 1, at the Shubert theater. An expensive cast of principals, Bert Lahr, Frances Williams, Ray Bolger and Luella Gear, will be featured and E. Y. Harburg has had a hand in the construction of the books, and perhaps the book, or libretto.

Everything else that this corner detailed about the show, including the presence of superbeauteous chorus of twenty-four (24) lovely girls, seems to have been kept intact, including the attraction's former title "The Family Album." Following two solid weeks at the Shubert, "Life Begins at 8:40" will move southwestward to Broadway — more precisely, toward the corner of 50th street and Broadway, where the famous Winter Garden was situate on the writer's last visit to the fast-fleeting district once known as Manhattan, or South Gotham.

To bolster these advance declarations, that sublimated counsel of public relations, C. P. Granicer, is due sometime late today at the Hotel Touraine in behalf of his employers, the aforementioned Messrs. Shubert, in the custody locally of Al Duffy, and Mr. G. will be possessed of documents for public dissemination which will certify the foregoing facts for you and that part of the public which depends on other sources for its theatrical news—news while it is news.

Do you think I'm spoofing? The box-office will be opened a week from today.

Spookiest

The spookiest welcome to Hollywood is claimed by John Beal, clever young actor imported from the Broadway stage by RKO Radio Pictures for a leading role in "Hat, Coat and Glove."

He was taken to his apartment and when he opened the door he was greeted first by the strains of an orchestra and then by his OWN VOICE!

"For a minute," explains Beal, "I felt creepy all over. Then I realized that the folks across the ventilating well were playing one of my phonograph records!"

Shirley Temple's latest screen hit, "Baby Take a Bow," will be at the Bowdoin on Sunday.

Rubber 'Shoes End Playground Din

Springfield, July 18—Residents in the neighborhood of the Sumner School ERA playground here objected to the noises made by youngsters. Supervisors of the playfield decided to substitute rubber horseshoes for the iron ones, causing part of the complaint.

Given in Marriage

By Adele Garrison

Katie, temperamental culinary queen, falls in line with Madge's changed plans for the Veritzen dinner.

CHAPTER 91

I MIGHT have known how my faithful little maid would react to my news of an extra guest for dinner, and the necessity of changing her plans. Never since she first came to work for me have I known her to flinch or be temperamental at extra work. Fly into tantrums she will, on what sometimes appears to be no provocation at all; but when anything really vital is at stake, Katie is what Dicky calls "all to the mustard."

She gave my announcement the tribute of widened eyes and a relieved grin.

"Ees dot all?" she asked carelessly. "Dot nuddings to feex. You shoost sit down and find out vot you want. Ven he coming?"

"In about three hours."

"Shucks! Dot's easy as poonkin pie. Me, I kin get oop eight course dinner in tree hours. Now tell me vot I feex."

It was no idle boast she had made; I knew that. And it was with a sense of relief that I settled back in my chair while she went to the kitchen desk, bringing back pencil and paper, and sat down in a chair opposite mine.

"First ting," she said, with an assurance born of many culinary conferences with me, "dose special tomato cocktails und little gowapses in living room."

I nodded, not trusting myself to speak, so mirth-provoking do I always find Katie's attempt to pronounce the word "canapes."

"Vot you vant in dem tings," she went on; "doose black fresh eggs?"

"Caviare, yes, but not alone," I told her. "Fix them the way you did the last time, with cream cheese and finely grated onion, and serve them on crisp crackers instead of toasted rounds."

"I know," she said. "Den oysters, don't you tink, or clams? Vich?"

"Oysters," I decided, with remembrance of Philip Veritzen's gastronomic tastes. "Then that cream of mushroom soup you make so deliciously."

"Yah; I got dot down pretty fine," Katie assented largely. "Now, vot for main course?"

"A chicken pie will be just the thing, Katie. Then we'll have mashed potatoes, and lima beans and asparagus tips with butter sauce, and a combination salad."

"Und for dessert we have dot apple fluff dot Meester Veritzen like, und den a bit of cheese und some toasted crackers, und coffee in living room."

"That will be a wonderful dinner," I said, "but, Katie dear, it will be a great deal of work."

KATIE, THE "FIXER"

"Ven you ever know me keek at work?" she asked loftily, but with truth. 'Und dese be noddings. Ve pretty near ready for vedding anniv'says—house all clean all but final doosting from cellar to attic—and dey fennish dot stairway, all decorations dey oop. Dees silver polishing all vot yet to do, und dot Jeem kin feenish dot easy ven he get troo roosting mit sheekens."

She gave an irresistible little giggle, knowing, as I did, that Jim would be back in harness as soon as I should leave the kitchen.

"So you see," she went on, "all I have to do now es to cook und serve dot dinner. Don't worry, I feex. But I don't use best napkins for Meester Veritzen. Dose all ready for day after tomorrow, ven vedding coom along."

"Of course not," I told her, rising. Then, as the smell of the stew came to my nostrils, I added, "It's too bad we can't use that stew."

"I'll bet dot Meester Veritzen he like it shoost as vell as sheekens," she said, "but old woman she tie herself oop in stitches all ofer house eef ve serve stew to Meester Veritzen."

"What will you do with the stew, Katie?" I asked hurriedly, to stop the ribald comment upon Philip Veritzen which, I knew was trembling on her tongue and which I wished neither to condone nor reprove.

"You no need to ask dot, mit Meester Hank und Meester Red coming from school tomorrow. Und Mees Marion und Mees Carolyn und Meester Ronald und Meester Bob? Dey all hollow down to deir shoes. Und no vunder! School cooking!" Her voice dripped contempt. "I serve me dot stew for loonch tomorrow, und you see dose youngsters go to it. Now don't you worry one bit more. You see flowers on table; dat's all. I feex."

Shining Glamour for Everyday Budgets

SATIN and cellophane—one sleekly shimmering, the other having such a lively glitter that it seems to let out sparks—are fashion and allure you could wish for, at a price that will make any girl's budget sit up and take notice. From a Boston shop, Miss Virginia Tolman of Cohasset and Boston models.

ning ensemble you have all the midsummer

By Annice Brink

SOME like to call the exciting new cellophane capes a modernist's version of all Old Andalusia's enchantment expressed in the fabric of Today; or if you prefer the ultra-sophisticated view they are like a De Mille idea of the decking for a mermaid in one of his superspers. Certainly they are enough to turn any girl's head.

When a jet-black cape is swung on over a white satin sheath, as in the ensemble Miss Virginia Tolman wears, the effect is one to turn many heads besides your own.

Satin, very light in weight and soft in texture, blooms luxuriously at about this time in the summer formal season. The two little panels floating out in back make a trick train that has enough dash to keep out of the way smartly when you walk or dance.

Turquoise with a brown cellophane cape has much distinction, as has orchid with an amethyst cape. Incidentally, cape and gown go together, both at surprisingly inexpensive cost.

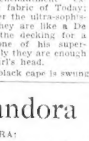
Miss Tolman is one of the most beautiful of the season's debutantes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Tolman of Cohasset.

If you would like to know more about the evening ensemble shown, phone Annice Brink, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

I have a girl who says she loves me. She buys me ties and says that one "date" with me means more than all the dances she goes to with Jack, a fellow who's four years older than she is and takes her out all the time.



Jack comes up to her house whenever he wants to and I have to go. In fact, he's been invited by her mother to spend his two weeks' vacation with them the latter part of August. She says she sees him to please her mother and that her mother insists that she write to him. She says she doesn't want to hurt him by telling him it is I she prefers. But, Pandora, where do I come in? I have to stay home while they step out. But when her mother wants something done, she calls on me to do it for them. What shall I do? JOHN W. W.

DEAR JOHN W. W.:

Are there any more at home like you? I thought your kind of sap went out with the horse-and buggy, the Sutherland sisters and those big blue and red bottles in drugstore windows. This hurts me more than it does you, John, but I must be firm with you. I must remind you that this year of 1934 is one year that one's brains cannot take too long a vacation. Things being as they are, we humans have got to make decisions if we don't want to find ourselves as completely out of the procession as is the Floradora sextette. Tell that Jill of yours to make up her mind whether it's to be John or Jack, or else. Win or lose, you'll be better off than you are now, lad. PANDORA.

Bridge Table Criticism Is Bad Form

By Josephine Culbertson

I think that the people who have played Bridge with me will concede me good manners at the Bridge table. I never "bawl out" my partner, nor do I criticize my opponents. In the first place, it is a breach of good form, and, in the second place, it is useless and profitless. However, I must admit that there was an occasion during the recent National Bridge Teachers' Convention in New York when, in a Duplicate game that furnished part of the entertainment for the teachers attending, my partner utterly failed to live up to the obligations of partnership in a situation which, though rare, appears to me to be crystal clear. In fact, when it was too late to change the result, my partner, who is not generally regarded as "dumb," admitted that his drawing of the wrong inferences was almost a major Bridge crime. The situation and hand upon which this discussion is based were as follows, my partner and I sitting South and North, respectively.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♡	Pass	3♡ (1)	Double (2)
Pass	Pass (3)	Pass

(1) A very fine effort to inhibit bidding by North and South in case North holds a big hand.

(2) The only alternative would be a bid of four hearts. This would be very bad in case my partner should respond with five diamonds. Under the circumstances I could do nothing but double for a takeout. It was, of course, perfectly obvious, even though my partner failed to grasp it, that this could not be a Double for penalties, for had I wanted to play for penalties I should have waited until my opponents had contracted for game, which they were almost sure to do.

(3) Of course South must bid four clubs. My double has clearly indicated a tremendous hand, since it shows preparedness to play at a contract of four, even though my partner should have a worthless hand. My partner must give me the opportunity to make the final decision as to the proper contract.

In the play the contract of three hearts doubled was made. The diamond 9 was opened. I cashed my Ace and then three spade tricks. But after that there were no tricks left for us.

Had my partner responded with four clubs, the hand would have been played in five clubs, which of course could have been made without difficulty. The losing diamond in the South hand could be discarded on the fourth spade in the North hand, thus limiting South's losers to one heart and one trump trick.

Gracious Lines for Fly-Leaf

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have given two very dear girl friends books as gifts. Each has asked me to write something in the front of the books, and I don't know just what to write that will be friendly and appropriate. Will you help me? A.

Perhaps something like this may appeal to you: "With dearest love, and the wish that you may enjoy this book," or "With this book come my love and my friendship," or "May every sentence of this book tell you how dear you are to me," or "This is just a hint of my love and devotion to you, Mary dear.

Lobsters Are No Longer a Luxury

By Martha Lee

Martha Lee's Wednesday morning broadcast over Station WAAB.

Lobster, from the time of the Roman Empire, has been considered a luxury. It still is a luxury as far as being an epicurean food, but it has come out of the luxury class as far as price is concerned. Lobster is selling now at prices that we all can afford.

Lobster is a shell fish that is native to the northern Atlantic and is on the market all year round, although during these months it is more plentiful and inexpensive.

In choosing lobster it should be neither too large nor too small. Around one pound or a pound and a half is an average weight.

Lobster should be served simply to bring out all its own succulence and fine flavor. Just broil it and serve it either hot with lots of melted butter or cold with a sprinkling of salt and pepper and a dash of mayonnaise, if desired. Or lobster may be split and broiled—the directions of which we are giving below.

As we never speak of food without speaking of its food value, we should state that lobsters are valuable in the diet because of their high content of iron, which is a preventive of thyroid disasters. It is also high in mineral content and a valuable source of calcium. It is an effective safeguard against mineral deficiencies in the diet.

BOILED LOBSTER

A live lobster should be cooked at once, as soon as it is delivered. To boil: Have in a deep kettle enough boiling water to cover the lobster, add salt (two teaspoonfuls to each quart of water). Take the lobster by the back and drop it head first into the boiling water. Cover and let boil hard five minutes; then reduce heat and let simmer (water in very gentle motion) half an hour. Too hard cooking makes the meat tough. This boiling is not always done in the home; lobsters usually can be bought already cooked in this manner. A lobster that was in good condition when it was boiled has its tail curled, and when the tail is straightened out it will fly back into place. When served whole, grasp body with one hand, using other to twist off the tail, from end, the meat may be pushed forward out of the shell. Throw away sand vein running down back of tail meat. Split body shell and in four pockets on each side where legs are attached will be found eight chunks of tender meat. When lobster is split lengthwise the "craw," or crop," in the head should be thrown away. In the body section the green liver and fat is good to eat and is often used in seasoning for lobster crumbs or stuffing. The claws are cracked before serving, and nut-crackers are part of the table equipment. The juicy morsels in the smaller leg joints should be used.

BROILED LIVE LOBSTER

Place lobster on its back and with a heavy knife split lengthwise. Remove green fat and red coral. Throw away the small "craw" or "crop" in the head and the dark vein down the tail section. Brush the meat of the lobster with seasoned melted butter and broil for 15 to 20 minutes until cooked through. Serve hot with melted butter. All of the meat now left in the lobster, including legs and claws, is edible.

Fingernails That Get Hard Use Need New Cream Good for Cuticle and Polish

IT MAY BE TRUE that men are unconscious critics, but don't for one moment think they are not critical of a woman's hands. The loveliest profile and the choicest perfume isn't going to steer their gaze from ill-kept, ragged finger nails. The charm of well-groomed hands is one of the chief assets of Frances Drake, lovely cinema star.

By Juliet Shelby

IF YOUR CUTICLE is ragged and hard and your nails are brittle, you are bound to have what I call self-conscious hands. You are constantly aware of their slip-shod appearance—and so are most people who see them. There are times when you want to sit on them to keep them out of sight! They handicap your poise; they rob you of your self-confidence.

It's a bit hard, I know, to keep fingernails looking nice during summer days. They get the brunt of all the fun we have—the swims we take, the games we play, the gardening we do; and earning a living isn't exactly easy on them in any season! But you must keep after them—keep the cuticle smooth, the nails cleaned and polished—if you want to have lovely expressive hands with a lot of social grace.

Let me give you the name of a fingernail cream that is a marvel in keeping the cuticle softended, the nails pliable and for smoothing away annoying hangnails. This cream is a boon to brittle, ridged nails. I simply cherish it because it is the only preparation I have found that can really control my stubborn cuticle.

Massage it around and on your nails once or twice a day after you scrub them. It vanishes at once and leaves no trace of grease or stickiness. If you are a devotee of liquid polishes, you will find that this cream preserves the polish and prevents it from drying and chipping off your nails.

Don't make the mistake of cheying your fingernails and biting them off. The best way to conquer that nervous habit is to keep your nails so perfectly manicured that there will be no temptation to bite off jagged ends.

If you are interested in learning the name of this fingernail marvel and where you may buy it, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Juliet Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston. If you prefer phoning for this information, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000.

Cold Showers Firm Flesh

Question: I have soft, large thighs and arms. What shall I do to make them firm? Would exercise on a rowing machine help? I am about five feet 5½ inches tall. What should I weigh? Due to many sprains, I have large ankles. Will an ankle strap bring the swelling down? —D. M. C., Charlestown.

Answer: At your age and height you should weigh about 122. Exercise will help firm your legs and arms. Yes, the rowing machine would help. Follow directions given with it. Cold showers following your daily bath with a brisk rub-down with a rough towel to bring up the blood will help make the flesh firmer. Use cold water frequently during the day. Your ankles evidently are weak. I suggest that you consult a good chiropodist and have him prescribe an ankle strap or arch for you.

YOU'LL be thrilled, too—first time you use Rinso! So safe for colors, so easy on hands. And what gleaming, snowy whiteness! No wonder the makers of 40 famous washing machines recommend Rinso. No wonder it is endorsed by the home-making experts of 316 leading newspapers.

Rinso is marvelous for tub washing, too! SOAKS out dirt—saves scrubbing—clothes last 2 or 3 times longer. You'll save money! Rinso gives rich, lasting suds—even in hardest water. Makes dishwashing and all cleaning quick and easy. Try it. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Jerome Displays Courage as He and Linda Are Called on to Face a Gorilla

SYNOPSIS

Jerome Crain, young naval architect, and a beautiful society girl, named Linda, land on a strange island in the Caribbean after having fled from a quarantined yacht. Their skiff is mysteriously set adrift and their clothes stolen, yet there is no other sign of a living human, at first. Intermittently, however, blood-curdling cries come from the jungle. The mystery deepens with the finding of a well-kept though deserted plantation. They take refuge in a small house there.

That night, Linda's slip is torn off her by some unseen creature and again the eerie scream is heard. Linda, frightened, insists that Jerome stay near her. He fears the prospect of having me aboard the same yacht with you, he says, ironically, "and now you insist on having me in the same house."

CHAPTER XIII

Nothing happened to disturb their slumber unless it was a certain lack of comfort and then the early morning chill. The latter made Jerome at dawn He edged away without rousing Linda and went out into the fresh and fragrant morning.

In the hope of sighting some craft that might be within signaling distance, he went down the coral dark tunnel of the ravine to the beach. The day was breaking suddenly as it does in the tropics, and the vista still opaque of sea, was serene but desolate.

Jerome felt that they should really camp on the other side of the island in the hope of attracting the attention of some passing vessel. The ship courses were not far, but they had no means of making a shelter and Linda would not give up the sanctuary of the house with its known uncouth creatures prowling about.

ANIMALS ON SCENE

He bathed, gathered a few shellfish, and went back up the little stream to the cool fresh beauty spot. As he came under the ledge he heard Linda's voice speaking in cooing, cajoling tones and thought she must be making friends with the macaw. The big brilliant bird had held himself aloof as if resenting their presence, like the terrifying beast of the night before, whatever it might be

He clambered up and saw Linda sitting on the edge of the porch. What claimed his attention was a round little beast squatting on the turf four or five yards in front of her. It was partly turned away from him and at first glance he could not determine its species.

Linda was trying to coax it closer with lumps of sugar. As Jerome watched, she tossed a lump toward the little animal, that reached out a long arm and snatched it, then started to nibble and suck at it, never taking its eyes from her. Jerome, watching, with only his head and shoulder above the ledge, saw that it was a little ape — a chimpanzee, he thought.

As he continued to watch, there came a rustle from a thick clump of bamboo. Jerome caught his breath. Another animal appeared but was of the same species, but larger. That would be the mother. For a moment it stood, half crouching, long arms extend, and knuckles on the ground. Its eyes were flickering from Linda, who stiffened suddenly, to the little fellow in front of her. Linda did not move.

As if unable to overcome its greed and envy, the newcomer crossed the intervening space in a series of bounds and grabbed the piece of sugar from the smaller one. There was a brief scuffle and angry chattering of clucks and squeals.

Jerome thought he understood what had puzzled him. It looked as if the naturalist had imported some chimpanzees that had the freedom of the island and bred there. This would account for everything that could be carried off having been so carefully put away. But it did not account for the big creature of which they had caught a glimpse making off from the old ruined tower.

Something came crashing through the denser growth to the right of the bamboos. There emerged a creature so huge and forbidding that Jerome's heart missed a beat and then began to pound. He saw that it was a full-grown gorilla.

It stood for a moment nearly erect, watching Linda. And as she did not move it drew near the scuffling pair and dealth the larger a swinging cuff that knocked it to one side. It then picked up the baby that straddled one hip and reached up for a pendulous breast.

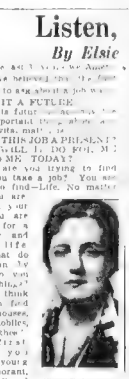
The hole performance was so grotesquely human that Jerome would have laughed if it had not been for the great size of the mother and the vexed, suspicious expression on the face she turned to Linda, precisely as if to say, "What do you mean by giving my baby sugar?"

Linda did not budge. She said on a placating tone, "Don't take it so hard, old girl. It won't hurt him. Have a piece yourself," and she tossed her a lump of sugar.

Jerome had never felt so great a rush of admiration for any display of cool nerve and courage. The big she-gorilla made a grimace that bared her teeth. It might have been either a demonstration of defiance, hostility, or an amiable gorilla smile. She swung down, snapped up the sweet morsel, sniffed at it, then began to munch it.

Jerome was thinking, "That settles it. This naturalist has imported not chimpanzees from South America but gorillas from Africa."

Then suddenly as if she had made concessions enough the mother gorilla let out a few resonant chatters that might have been "Good day and thanks" Swaying around, dust her larger offspring another maternal cuff, and bounded off into the thicket carrying her baby, with the little boy jumping along beside her. As they disappeared Jerome hauled himself up and hurried to where Linda had sunk down on the porch



Elsie Robinson

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

For the last [illegible] Americans have believed that the [illegible] questions was always a job.

HAS IT A FUTURE

But its future [illegible] least important thing about a job. The vital matter is

"HAS THIS JOB A PRESENT? WHAT WILL IT DO FOR ME AND TO ME, TODAY?

What are you trying to find when you take a job? You are trying to find—Life. No matter who you are or what your job you are looking for a larger and livelier life. But what do you mean by Life? Do you mean "things?" Do you think you can find life in houses, automobiles, fine clothes?

At first when you were young and ignorant, you believed that these things meant Life. Remember when you bought that watch out of your first pay check? You were sure that everything would be changed—somehow glorified if you could only possess that wrist watch. THE INSIDE FEELING

Then you did possess it And after the first thrill nothing was changed at all! Within a few days the wrist watch was just another gadget—and you were facing the same old feeling of dreariness within yourself

So you learned the first and most important lesson about Life—that it's the INSIDE FEELING not the ONTSIDE THING that counts.

YOUR OWN FEELINGS MAKE LIFE

Your own feelings are all the Life you will ever have. They are also the reward you get out of any job. You don't EARN a million dollars by terrific activity and struggle but if you don't FEEL LIKE A MILLION after you get it, of what use will that million be to you?

Since that is so how utterly idiotic is our notion that the present must be sacrificed for the sake of some remote future gain! For there plainly can be no future that will mean anything [illegible] you aren't getting a kick out of [illegible] Who have made good each had bargaining, and who were worse and feel nothing but the grind and tangle of the days to their own pockets. Of all crazy forms of suicide, theirs is the worst.

Most women are honestly bewildered by the failure of their own lives. They have played the game according to the rules they were taught to follow. And it doesn't work. Many of them choose the right husbands, but they have

MANY MISFITS

They didn't choose a job because they liked the job for itself—because it fitted their temperament and tempo. They took it for the security, the steady wages, regularity and dreary hours and [illegible] cash.

Their business is filled with bitter workers who would have been happy, better boys.

But the brokerage business is supposed to have a future and the advertising business hasn't. So willy nilly, young Jimmy must go to Wall Street

And if at any case you happen to be wonderful why was where we are today.

We have still be the richest and most powerful nation on earth but what good does it do us? And what a lot more fun our unambitious grandad had, ploughing fields or pedaling pots, cobbling shoes and building ships BECAUSE THEY LIKED IT, then we [illegible] up happy wheelbarrow for high-hat Rolls Royces

So don't ask what a job holds in the future. Ask rather what it will do for you in the present. How much richer will it make your life as you go along? How much will it add of fun and [illegible]liness? What does it hold to excite your curiosity, challenge your courage, add to your joy?

Will it enlarge your LIFE or will it just distend your pocket book? Will you FEEL more if you like it or will you merely EARN more?

Dare to seek a job with that attitude and you'll find far more than work or income. You'll discover Yourself and your World and Life. And whether you hold that job for a day or a year YOU'LL HAVE LIVED EACH DAY TO THE BRIM

(Copyright, 1934, for the Boston Evening American.)

No. The director of the Washington Zoo told me once that tame gorillas are docile and good-natured."

"Gorillas? Is that what they are?"

Must be. That lady was nearly six feet tall and weighed close to four hundred pounds. And her husband will be bigger still."

"Then he didn't have on your shirt."

"I guess that was the Crown Prince. I see now how easy it was for him to cram the bell clapper into my shoe."

MILLENS BATTLE BANK FOR $9000

This Is Life
by
ROBERT E. ROGERS

There are three possible interpretations of basic causes of the trouble in San Francisco. First, and traditional cause, is the old enmity between organized union labor and organized capital, which for well over a generation has been more bitter, more disorderly and more unyielding than perhaps anywhere else in the United States. The mere mention of the names of Harrison Gray Otis, of the McNamara Brothers and Lincoln Steffens' unsuccessful attempt at reconciliation, and the Mooney case (essentially a labor case) will be enough to make a strong case for interpreting the general strike as another struggle to the death over the question of the closed open shop.

Robert E. Rogers

The second interpretation is, of course, munism, the highly successful tactics by a radical minority, under the leadership n ex-Australian whose status as a citizen is doubt, has managed to agitate the old-line ns into their present position. Of course, once in labor troubles is no new thing in lifornia and the West generally. If the Comists are behind the present strike they have nd the ground prepared for them and the ng far easier than they could possibly find ere in the East.

The third and most interesting explanation is the whole thing is part of a general movement h is sweeping California to set up a new form government in the state. It is called the EPIC ement. It is a political party now, with a can- te for governor. The candidate is none other Upton Sinclair, veteran Socialist, novelist, pub- r, food reformer, faster, and the most consistent ionary idealist in America. He is a genuine ic of rather extraordinary business and or- zing ability, whose integrity has never been tioned though his horse sense frequently has

The movement is the outgrowth of a book called Governor of California," which he published summer. For some reason or other I am on Sinclair's mailing list, and I have been receiving s for several months a weekly newspaper, called ton Sinclair's Epic News," which tells of the gress of his campaign. Sinclair, curiously ugh, is running not on the Socialist ticket but e Democratic. According to him, many of the ld newspapers of the state agree that he has the ld-line Democrats licked and will likely be the Democratic candidate for governor in November his platform, a very radical one, he claims to be he logical extension of Mr. Roosevelt's policies nd the New Deal.

His platform proposes state land colonies (all le land being taken over by the state), which will e built upon and made suitable for the unemployed sustain themselves on. Factories, too, will be ught by the state and turned over to the unem- yed. The California Authority for Land, for Production, and for Money (CAL, CAP, and CAM) ll organize and finance the whole thing. Other tures of the EPIC platform are steeply grad- ted income, inheritance, and public utilities taxes, mption of small properties from taxation, a state l tax for unused or unimproved land (old Henry rge redevivus!), and pensions of $50 per month all needy persons, including widows with ldren

Sinclair claims that he is applying Roosevelt s, which as yet are only vague and tentative cted he will put them into effect. To any old le like me his original book and his newspaper tform seems the wildest Utopianism, but there he no doubt that he has a whale of a campaign ng and has the regular Democrats of California ly scared. At the very least, he can elect a blican governor, and he may be able to steal ough votes from both parties to be elected. The cedents in American politics are numerous, and le is capitalizing a tremendous state-wide discon- t, of which the general strike is only one ex- ple. The Imperial Valley trouble, for instance, ery serious indeed.

Backing up EPIC there is, apparently, a topian Society," a kind of underground political rganization, which is organizing in factories and nes, in spite of attempts to root them out. Sin- air insists that in some plants the employes are per cent Utopians. They can be trusted to back EPIC.

The bearing of all this in the strike is obvious. nion labor in San Francisco has gone radical. EPIC campaign is right up their alley. The dispatches admit that public sympathy is still onsibly strong on the side of the strikers. If strike committee sees that the city does not y hungry and if, on the other hand, the police st treat the strikers too roughly, the result ht be a very considerable accession of strength nclair's cause.

It will be worth watching. I haven't the slightest confidence in Upton Sinclair's ideas. But he one of the most interesting and most sincere men America. Possibly this election may justify the peration which European radical opinion has ays had for him.

PEPPERMINT IS FOR GIANTS, SAYS EXPERT

By PEGGY DOYLE

Peppermint oil may soon displace the banana oil in popular favor that is, if you are interested in growing up into a Max Baer or a Jim Londos

It's this way. Experiments are reported to indicate that peppermint oil may be found to contain the valuable vitamin A, the vitamin that is essential to growth.

Experiments are being carried on by Professor Wallace R Brode, of Ohio State University, speaker at this morning's session of the Second Summer Conference on Spectroscopy at Massachusetts Institute of Technology

REACTION OF COLOR

Professor Brode, who is one of this country's outstanding authorities on spectroscopy, in speaking on the subject, "Absorption Spectra of Cobalt Compounds," said

An English scientist, the world's authority on vitamin testing, has said that the best test for vitamin A is the spectroscopic test. Peppermint oil, given this test, shows the color reaction which interferes with vitamin A—bright blue color with antimony trichloride"

Probably the greatest commercial benefits from spectroscopy, the science of light analysis, will be felt in the dye field, according to the Ohio State authority. Through the use of the spectrograph, scientists are able to separate a dye into its component parts. They are now at work on making up dyes synthetically and soon they hope to perfect dyes that will be non-fading

THEORY EXPLODED

Another scientific quirk of interest to the layman, to say nothing of the dirt-farmer, is the recent discovery by Dr. Lewis H Flint of the Washington, D. C., bureau of plant industry, that the lettuce seedling will have none of your ultra-violet light, which has been found to be so effective in promoting growth and health in animal life. He said,

"Moistened and placed under red, orange, or yellow cellophane, the dormant lettuce seed germinate in twenty-four hours. Under the color range from blue to violet and beyond, not only do the dormant seeds refuse to grow, but seed not in the dormant state are so affected that they refuse to grow when tested again under ordinary warm-room germination conditions. This end of the light spectrum, in other words, exerted a very strong growth-inhibiting effect."

PREDICTS DEATH

Originally used by astronomers, the spectroscope has been discovered by science to be an aid in detecting approaching death

In a report made by P. and L. Lecomte de Nouy of the Pasteur Institute, France, but read at the conference in their absence by Professor George R. Harrison, chairman, it was revealed that, by means of a spectroscopic study of the blood, a man's death was forecast more accurately than by his physicians

In studying the structural nature of blood, the Pasteur Institute scientists analyzed more than 5000 samples of the blood of men, horses and sheep, using only the serum or else the plasma, both colorless substances

USED IN BLOOD TESTS

However, under the invisible ultra-violet light, those portions of the blood exhibit considerable "color" which shows its presence by absorbing some of the light passed through the plasma or serum into a spectroscope. The absorption shows as lines on the spectrograph and these lines are used to plot a curve of the blood.

NEEDHAM TRUST SUIT ANSWERED BY BROTHERS

Call on Institution to Prove Cash Was Part of Loot

Milton and Irving Millen, awaiting the trial tomorrow of a day called upon the Needham Trust Company which they robbed to prove that those $9000 bills found in evidence had no relation whatever to the bank. It was at the expense of double murder.

A preliminary hearing on the proceedings were to come next month, but their execution was seen.

To a bill in equity brought by the bank and seeking possession of this money, they filed answer today, through Isaac T. Kaplin, School street attorney in Dedham court.

Another admitted denials of the bank's allegations. Said Bail and call upon the Needham Trust Company to prove their assertions.

The Millens' trial counsel, George Stanley Harvey, had declared that if any of this money was returned to his clients it would be turned into the public fund for the families of the Needham policemen Sydney Merrifield and Frank Haddock slain during the robbery committed by the Millens and Abe Fiber.

CLAIM $14,388 STOLEN

The bank claims $14,388 was stolen and that part of the loot was the $1416 recovered in New York when the Millens were arrested. $350 turned over to the authorities by Faber's sweetheart, Rose Krellar and $4720 seized in a Washington safe deposit vault.

No legal refuse remains for the three convicted Needham bank bandits, savers to avoid pronunciation of the sentence of death by Judge Nelson P. Brown, as he declared today.

Providing the Supreme Court does not interfere, Judge Brown will tell the fatal story to each of the Millen-Faber trio early in October.

MOTIONS TO BE FILED

This, according to Norfolk County officials, was the position that the Needham bandits found themselves in today even as Attorney Harvey prepared to file motions for a new trial for the Millens.

Harvey's motions, it was reported, will be based on alleged irregularities in the Dedham courthouse on the night that the jury brought in guilty verdicts against his clients.

But, Judge Brown said that he intended to speed up the sentencing of the prisoners and he let it be known that he canceled a trip abroad to remain in order to "clean up" the several legal aspects of these cases.

Norma Brigham Millen, bride of Morton Millen, was refused a new trial yesterday as was "Abe" Faber pal of the Millens.

Both the girl and the youth took the news of their refusals without comment. She cried, although Norma cried for a while.

Declaring that $17,000 had been wasted in the Medford welfare department in two years, Mayor John J. Irwin told the Medford Kiwanis Club that a five-man welfare board was needed.

Despite economies practiced by the city, he also declared, there may be a small advance in this year's tax rate. The city's greatest need, he said, is a city hall.

Plans for the coming year include the replacement of five miles of cement pipe, rebuilding of Boston avenue, development of Wright's pond as a recreation center, and restoration of the dental clinic to the schools, stated the mayor.

Commissioner of Public Works Christopher J. Carven has announced that funeral processions using the Sumner Tunnel must pay the regular toll charges.

East Boston undertakers had previously protested the charge to City Councillor Henry Scirretta of East Boston, claiming that funeral cars had been exempted from tolls on the ferries.

New York, July 18—Clock-cop writers of the big smart-boys magazines don't compete much any more. They've all gone over to the pen. Every star of the [illegible] has his own desk paneled office, often small [illegible] to get away from the [illegible] up scenes [illegible] world.

They are paired off like [illegible] Any one of the [illegible] double to imagine of any two [illegible] novelists. Some of them fly to confer with their clients in super [illegible] owned planes and [illegible] in [illegible] as during the New England [illegible].

One [illegible] from the meditating ground [illegible] quarter of ad men who have made salary history in their industry—O. B. Walters, Lee Maxwell, Phil Lennen and Art Kudner. Their yearly incomes, along with about a dozen more, run well into six figures, and all have amassed fortunes.

Expert copywriting has its artistry in brevity. A single line most often tell a story that has several dozen angles. It looks easy—indeed a cinch. Yet those who are working at it every day but the percentage who attain higher brackets is small.

I talked to an investor with the usual miseries today. He said the only railroad stock he had not purchased was that of that Long Island, telling an impetuous salesman airily that "the road didn't go anywhere." He now wishes he had not been so fresh.

Theodore Dreiser, next to Irvin Cobb, is New York's most infatuated window shopper. On increasingly rare visits from his country place he lumbers about with the lost air of ship officers, most of whom, incidentally, are window shoppers, standing before this window and that and totally unconscious of the gawkers who invariably clot on the sidelines. Dreiser walks, like everything he does, with a ponderosity. At times he seems to be charging an imaginary football line.

I was drawn into a movie the other day by a lobby poster announcing Buster West. Here is a performer who has lifted slapstick into realm of sheer artistry. His loose, uneven and lazy walk across the stage takes on the fascination of a stalking panther. His timing in absurd falls or postures has a gracefulness suggesting a Nijinsky float through the air. West's buffoonery is out of the lowest comedy cliches, but there's a feeling one is watching a master. Chaplin has similar technique. Also Jimmy Savo. West used to be tossed around by his father, like still another Buster, Buster Keaton, to standard vaudeville days. All have something—these hardened troupers—that shines through jovial commonness.

Sophie Tucker's metier is long outmoded. Her songs belong to an era entirely gone, her delivery is barbed with vulgarity, and Sophie herself is no candidate for a beauty prize. Yet so robust are her jags of clangour and so superb her sense of showmanship, she never fails to put over her chanty and bring down the house. It is not specious press agentry she has brought London, Paris and New York to their collective feet cheering. I have beheld the phenomena in all three cities. Amid her rowdy brawlings something of her kindly generosity and loyalty to friends must go over the footlights. Another successful slam-bang singer is Blossom Seely.

Blossom Seely's husband and stage partner, Benny Fields, is also a performer whose fervor sparks contagion. He is, so far as careful records determine, the first crooner, wah-wahing in a Chicago saloon back room when Rudy Vallee was Hubert Whatshisname in Whatyoucallems at a Maine crossroads.

Strictly tailored suits for women are creeping into every wardrobe and fashion experts expect the revival to reach a furore by fall. The most accomplished of tailored ladies, to my notion, are Madge Evans, Katharine Cornell and Julia Hoyt. In her day, the show girl, Dolores, now sported ill in London, was always smartly turned out in precisely garmented ensembles, never without a lapel rose. Still another perfect model for tailored effects is Billie Dove.

I dined at Ben Riley's last night with a learned gentleman with a passion for palaver. He slunged with keen analysis into the enormous intricacies of economics, winding up with a plea not to be quoted. His secret is safe. Even though I knew what he was talking about I'd say nothing.

Don't you really think, I mean seriously, when you really sit down to think about it things seriously that the barbaric institution known as the cocktail party is ruining the American Constitution?

Eleventh-Hour Nerves, Wrestlers vs. Boxers Baer's Official No-Man | Donkey Baseball and Berlenbach's Saga; Klem's Pride Wounded

By AUSTEN LAKE

AS ONE WHO HAS spied on the eleventh hour nervous spasms [of] Jack Sharkey, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Primo Carnera and [oth]er glove fighters who spent the final hours before a champion[sh]ip battle in gnawing the lining of their lips and retiring to their dens to sulk, I am always surprised at the calm, almost urbane good temper of heavyweight wrestlers in the last moments before a title bout

Austen Lake

Today neither Londos, in his Statler Hotel suite, nor George, in his chambers at Mansion Inn, are denying themselves to friends, and their mood is cheerful, almost fatalistic. I find this hard to fit with what should be a normal attitude in the eleventh hour of high tension sport, where personal fortunes are at stake.

Sharkey, whose nerves were jumpy and given to easy fraying, has told me that the last few hours before a title fight were torture of the damned, that he fought and refought the fight on the screen of his mind before entering the ring. And Dempsey has said [th]at he spent his final moments in gradually growing angry, so [th]at the moment of entering the ring found him in a flame of in[te]rnal fury and eagerness to be at the job.

Only exception to this rule among fighters seems to be Max Baer, who told me today that he could fall asleep on the rubbing [t]able while waiting the call to the ring. And after seeing his pre-match manner on the night of the Carnera battle I am inclined to believe him.

LONDOS EXPLAINS his eleventh hour philosophy by the fact that wrestling champions average three matches a week in defense of their title, and become immune to nervous tension, while the glove champions fight once, or perhaps twice a year, and must go through a six weeks training build up and emotional keying.

"An angry wrestler is a losing wrestler," said Jimmy. "It's a continual lesson in controlling your emotions and keeping cool. Originally I had a terrific temper and used to fly into almost insane rages. I am honest in saying that I have not let myself be angry for years."

Max Baer's Official No-man

FRANK POCASSI IS Max Baer's invisible man, who formerly travelled 11 years with Jack Dempsey, as a sort of private trouble shooter, deputy manager and bum-greeter.

If the champion's deluxe auto bends a fender on somebody's flivver, Frank melts the asking price of $25,000 down to a settlement of $10 for a new fender and a few bucks for an ornament of the American bar representing the plaintiff.

He is the buffer who greets the shills and stooges who wait in line outside the champion's suite and beg the price of a few drams for the sweet sake of old acquaintance. For worthy cases he shreds off a leaf from his bank role, amounting to nearly $50 a day. This is technically known as "the bite" among all boxing champions.

I am told that "the bite" with Dempsey used to run $250 a day and is even now more than a third of that figure.

An orphan baby in Seminole, Mo., has been christened Max Baer! Would the champion care to endow the child? A gentleman who lost $150 he had bet on Carnera, complains that his family is destitute as a result. Would the champ care to reimburse him?

Pocassi usually says "no." You have no idea what a talent this lean, quizzical man, has for saying the two letter negative.

DEPRESSION IS the maternal parent of novelty. For example take the hard times the semi-pro and independent baseball teams are having in these lean years. So, comes the House of David team, one of the most prosperous of tourist nines in past seasons, to Lowell with a stable of donkeys and a set of night lights.

The Davidians will play Lowell, Monday night, mounted on donkeys while at bat and on foot while in the field. The new game, if you please, is termed "donkey baseball."

Pathetic Saga of the "Astoria Assassin"

EIGHT YEARS AGO Paul Berlenbach was carving out a fortune as light heavyweight champion of the world. Never a clever boxer, he could soak up a superhuman amount of punishment and finally wear his man out. Perhaps he earned a quarter of a million in his brief rise, being a hard, round-house puncher and therefore popular with the trade. But he spent his money quickly, being the proverbial good time Charley to the ragtag swipes who hung on his coattails.

Tomorrow night in Lowell, Paul, now a fourth rate wrestler, is picking up coffee and cake money in the semi-final match at Laurier Park, his wits foggy and his features dulled by the heavy hammering in the old days. The ragtag swipes, bums and cadgers never bother him now, because he has nothing to give.

Now, collapsed physically and broke, he wrestles preliminary bouts on the honky-tonk circuits, glad for a handful of silver coins and a bit of warmth for his stomach.

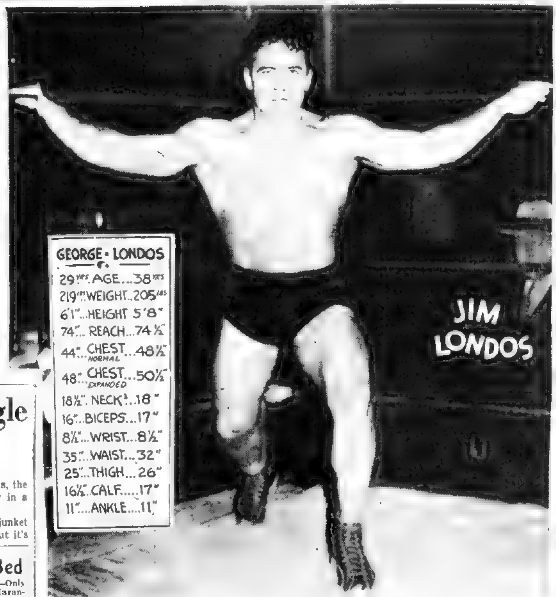
BILL KLEM, DEAN OF National League umpires, whose favorite boast has always been, "I've never been proved wrong," has suffered his greatest blow to his professional pride.

His decision on an infield fly in the game between the Cardinals and Cubs, on July 2, has been reversed by President John A. Heydler, who has ordered the game to be replayed from the seventh inning onward.

Strangely enough, the rule governing the play, which Bill flunked, is one of the simplest in the book. One man out in the Cubs seventh, while that team was leading 4 to 1. The bases full, when a high fly was lifted. For a moment it seemed to be drifting foul, but finally was blown into fair ground in front of the plate. Bill allowed the runner on third to score and the batter to reach safe, instead of automatically calling the batsman out.

It is not the first time that Heydler has ordered a game to be resumed in its later stages. He did that with the Braves and Cubs some years ago, causing the teams to take the field for a replay of the ninth inning with the same players, pitchers, and situation on the bases.

How Rivals Compare for Title Match



Braves and Bucs Tangle in Twin Bill Today

By Joe Cashman

Having had their little song and dance in the tank towns, the Braves resume their serious business of championship play in a doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates this p. m.

One wouldn't go so far as to say that the two day junket down east, nice as it was, added to the Warriors energy, but it's unlikely that any ill effects will be noted.

The regular [illegible] spared and never exerted themselves at Bangor or St. Stephen [illegible] today as well as Buck Jordan and Barber Bill Urbanski were left at home to rest [illegible]

So if the Bucs are [illegible] having a breeze they [illegible] a pair of victories before [illegible] their prestige.

Manager Bill McKechnie has high hopes that the vacation has relieved Bill Urbanski's Charley Horse enough to permit the little shortstop to return to the line up today

URBANSKI NEEDED

Boss Bill hasn't any fault to find with the play of Danny McGee, Harrisburg rookie, but there's only one Urbanski and the Tribe must have two diminutive sparkplug playing regularly to have a chance of finishing in the first division.

At this writing the natives are three games back of the fourth-place Pittsburgh entry. They can overcome that handicap and might even catch the Cards before the finish but they'll require every break that Lady Luck can give to turn the trick.

The barnstormers arrived back in town early this morning after an overnight trip [illegible] from Calais Maine

The trip was a success anyway it is looked at.

The Tribesmen had a lot of fun winning two games, collected two fat guarantees and made thousands of friends

BRASS BAND OUT

The promoters at both Bangor and St Stephen cleaned up plenty and the warmest of the welcome in both cities and way stations proved conclusively that the populace greatly appreciated the McKechnie clan's willingness to make the long journey to territory never before visited by a big league club

The crowd at St. Stephen, where the Warriors beat the Kiwanis Club Maritime champions, 11 to 3, numbered more than 5000, and there are only 3500 in the town.

The customers came from hundreds of miles around in New Brunswick and across the river in Maine.

The streets were lined with flags the buildings decorated, and the players were taken out to the park behind a brass band.

Proceedings will seem very drab this p. m.

Rabbit Still in Bed

Rochester, N. Y., July 18—Only by a miracle will Rabbit Maranville be able to play ball again.

The Braves' pepperpot, still in bed most of the time, has his leg encased in a metal plate, which can not be removed for another week. And after that comes another siege in bed

Rabbit spends the day reading the sports pages of the papers and the fan mail, which keeps pouring in to him.

Kay Winthrop Eliminated

Manchester-by-the-Sea, July 18—Quarter-finals were on the schedule today in the women's 11th annual Essex County invitation singles tournament

They paired Marjorie Morrill Painter, Dedham, and Catherine Wolfe, Chicago; Mae Ceuvoret, Wichita, Kan., and Norma Taubele, New York; Marjorie Sachs, Cambridge and Ruby Bishop, California; Mary Greef Harris, Kansas City and Jane Sharp, California

Feature of the third round play was the defeat of Katharine Winthrop by Catherine Wolfe. Miss Winthrop was not seeded but she was expected to reach the quarter-finals with little difficulty

Chicago, July 18—The rival Sox close their four game series here this afternoon with Fritz Ostermueller on the mound for the local and Milton Gaston for the White [Sox].

The Red Sox have taken two of the three games thus far and with their capable little southpaw working today, they should make it three out of four

The third game was marked by the splendid pitching of Wesley Ferrell who held the White Sox to six hits while the Red Sox were winning 5 to 2. It was Wesley's seventh victory since he joined the club

The Boston Sox move to Cleveland tomorrow where they will be joined by Lefty Grove. Lefty has just recovered from a tonsil operation

Cleveland, O., July 18—Babe Ruth received his 1999th and 2000th base on ball as the Yanks were being trimmed by Cleveland here, 13 to 3.

By E. B. Schriftgiesser

Poorhouse Brigade to Cheer for Londos

By Dave Egan

MY SUPER-SPECIAL OF THE DAY — JEEMEE LONDOS AT TOP WEIGHT.

They do not give us customers credit for understanding these sporting events, but we do. So, without the aid of the Magic Coin we are selecting Londos.

Your envoy was never a person to extract his buts and ifs from a limited vocabulary. Here comes an if. If Ed George wins, I will devour the cheapest straw hat any reader of the American can purchase.

Not that George isn't there or thereabouts. Just that the great Greek is a rollicking rassler.

The two greatest defensive rasslers in the world will be in there tonight at Fenway Park, two gentlemen who know every angle of the game. But both claim they will desert their ham-and-cheese wrestling for a topsy-turvy brand. We shall see.

There ain't any Annie Oakleys for this evening. It will be a charity show, with the receipts devoted largely to Ed George, Jeemee Londos, and the Boston Evening American Xmas Basket Fund. What fund, eh, keeeeed!

Here is a break for the customers. G. Wellington McLean, Fuzzy Joe, Harry the Hawker, One-Glim Connolly, and all the boys have announced publicly that they would lend their aroma to the affair. Ah, what an aroma the affair should have!

Your envoy will be present and that is ominous. The match, without any doubt about it, will go seven or eight hours, with both men finally being strangled. That's what happens when Col. Egan attends a wrestling match.

George has many adherents in this part of the world, and, since he is younger than Londos, they say he will win. Moreover, Herr Paul Forbes Bowser has stated in open meeting, that George is the greatest wrestler since Ed "Strangler" Lewis was a youth. That makes it an even money proposition or something that bears a close facial resemblance to it.

Coin Picks George to Toss Londos

Jack Conway's Magic Coin took a good look at both George and Londos this morning, and then decided to ride with George.

"George has youth," said the Coin, "And youth will tell in the long run tonight."

George and Londos today are heavily guarded by detectives as they wait for the call which will send them into the ring. There have been threats that an effort would be made to kidnap one of the principals to the championship bout

George ruled a 10 to 9 favorite [illegible] This is due [illegible] the fact he is champion, [illegible] backing.

George [illegible] the favorite with [illegible] The fans would [illegible] youthful mat hero [illegible] the veteran Londos [illegible] defeat.

If George wins tonight, he will go to New York where [he] will be featured by Jack Curley. The latter also has [illegible] promotion rights on Londos [in] New York

Tonight's bout will definitely clear up the [muddle] that has existed in the heavyweight wrestling situation for six years

George has had the strongest [claim] to the championship in view [of the] fact he could trace his title [back to] Frank Gotch. Londos, however, has had strong backing [from] the New York Athletic Commission, the Pennsylvania Athletic [Commi]ssion and the National Wrestling Association

MATMEN AT PEAK

There will be many notables at [illegible] Governor Ely, Lieutenant-Governor Bacon, Mayor Mansfield, former Mayor Curley, Max Baer, Jack Sharkey and [illegible] Fish will be numbered among [tho]se at the ringside

George came to Boston early today from his training camp at [illegible] Wayland, while Londos [mo]tored to this city from his [head]quarters at Woburn

The rival wrestlers are each in the best possible condition. They [expec]t to set a furious pace from the start of the match

The result of the contest will be anxiously awaited in every wrestling community in the world.

It is the battle to the wrestling death between the mighty kings of the mat

It should be a hard, bitter contest, replete with thrills.

It is fitting that it should be staged in Boston which is the hub of the wrestling universe

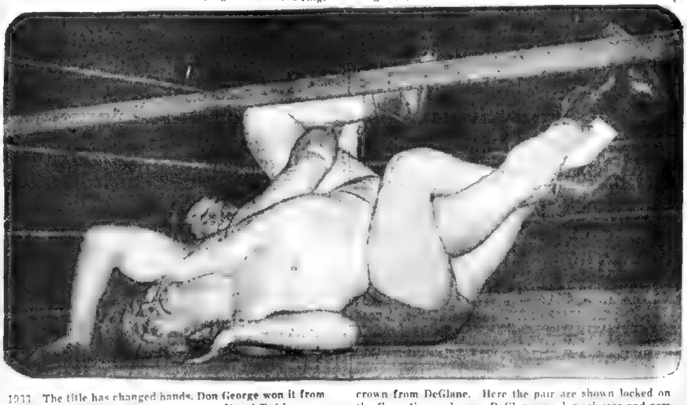
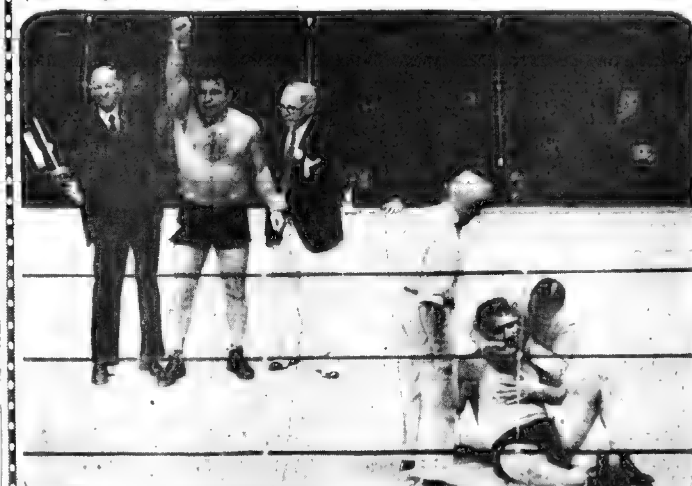
Thumbing the Album of the Wrestling Royalty

1929—Strangler Lewis and his crushing headlock ruled the wrestling world. But a new figure, dynamic and forceful, had appeared in the mat world. He was Gus Sonnenberg, football hero and the father of the flying tackle in the ring. Here Lewis and Sonnenberg are shown in the ring with Paul Bowser holding the famous championship belt. The match drew a record gate of over $70,000 gross. Sonnenberg won.



1933—The title has changed hands. Don George won it from "Sonny." Lewis won it from George. Henri DeGlane entered the picture and won it from Lewis. Then George disproved the adage they never come back. He recaptured the crown from DeGlane. Here the pair are shown locked on the floor, George having DeGlane in a leg scissors and arm hold. The Michigan collegian won, but only after a wild struggle.



1934—The title has been clouded. Jim Londos and Jim Browning have laid claims to the ermine worn by George. The wrestling powers that be have decided on an elimination of champions. Londos put Browning out of the picture in New York. Here the Greek is shown being declared the winner by Joe Humphries. Browning is still on the floor recovering from Londos' unconscious hold. Some time elapsed before he was fit again.

U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM CHOICE OVER ANZACS

By John R. Tunis

Universal Service Sports Cable

London, July 18.—... week-end of the Australians over the ... in the final round of the European zone play ... left to determine the holder of the Davis cup for this year.

On Saturday, Monday and Tuesday next the Australians will meet the Americans on the center court at Wimbledon in the inter-zone final.

A week later, the winner faces England, present holder of the trophy, in the challenge round.

Although Team Captain Dick Williams, after the fortnight's championship at Wimbledon, declared himself to have an open mind as to the composition of the American team, there now seems to be little doubt about Frank Shields and Sidney Wood playing the four singles matches against the Australians.

The doubles combination ... George Lott and ... Lester Stoefen ... be announced ... Saturday.

... the former ... Against this ... Jack Crawford's resources appear rather limited.

He must name himself and Vivian McGrath for the singles and while he will reserve his decision on the makeup of the doubles until the last minute, he will have no alternative but to nominate ... and Adrian Quist as the only team capable of confronting the ... American team.

If Shields, Wood and the doubles combination play only as well as they did at Wimbledon, and I expect them to reach better form with their intensive work of the intervening weeks, an American victory over Australia seems a certainty.

Golfers planning to play in The Country Club of New Bedford annual four-ball invitation should lose no time getting in touch with President George Cherry, John Duff, Ernest Tabor or Dana Gilling. Demands for bids are rapidly exhausting the supply.

According to Al Feeyan, the Cambridge Municipal course is getting a great play.

NEEDLE-SS TO SAY:

This Is a Pointed Discussion

(The scene is the desk of the sports editor. One of the staff bustles in, as sports writers are prone to do with tidings. He has discovered a story of reader interest. The following dialogue ensues. In such manner items like these are born.)

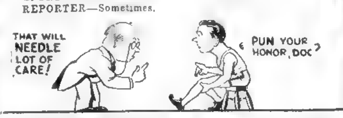
REPORTER—Say, chief, I just learned that Christie Harris, former three letter man at Boston University, played sports for four years with a needle in his knee.

SPORTS EDITOR—So they're doping up their athletes, eh.

REPORTER—No, no. Christie has had it in there ever since he was a tot. He never bothered to have it taken out.

SPORTS EDITOR—Didn't it ever get under his skin.

REPORTER—Sometimes.



SPORTS EDITOR—He must have had a good eye in basketball.

REPORTER—Yup, and he had the shortstop post all sewed up before the coach called for baseball candidates.

SPORTS EDITOR—He was a handy football player—very sharp.

REPORTER—And witty, too. He kept the team in stitches.

SPORTS EDITOR—I liked the way he'd stick to the pigskin. A clean tackler, never scratched.

REPORTER—That's right. He pinned 'em hard.

SPORTS EDITOR—All right, write a gag yarn on that. And make the needle the thread of the story.

REPORTER—Righto, I see the point.

(And a needle on the knee was responsible for this.)

FOURTH RACE

High Glee, Teralice, Slap-Dash

HIGH GLEE in her present condition will stand a world of beating in an affair of this kind. TERALICE, which won his last in track record time, looms as the main opposition despite the fact that he is coming off a mile and one-sixteenth race. The Al Bartels-owned colt is a keen sprinter and won over the six furlong route in a previous effort. SLAPDASH ... a creditable effort in her debut a few days ago and figures dangerous.

He seems quite capable of doubling this ordinary lot. HERNANDO, a two-time winner, has been away from the races for quite a spell and may have been ailing. However, if fit, he should prove mighty troublesome. COLD SPILL won her last with ease and shapes up well for the minor award.

EARNINGS ARE CONTINUING TO IMPROVE

Business Machines Report Snow Good Sales Increase

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Many months ago the writer noted that he had been told the large makers of explosives were looking toward home business. Again informants advise us not to overlook the stocks in this category. Atlas Powder, Hercules Powder and duPont are the leading issues, and if half of the cheerful estimates on earnings come true then they will all sell at materially higher price levels. We intend to keep a careful eye on their tape action.

The recent post-tape action of the rails we have considered from the pension angle and other expense in creasing factors. Just those rail executives think the plight of their lines is may be better understood by briefing the remarks of an observer at the convention of rail executives at Atlantic City. Government control is not to blame. Increasing expenses and declining revenues cannot continue without unpleasant results.

From an immediate market standpoint rails look expanded. Even traders of the rare days left, may try to catch the swing but we would prefer waiting for on any sharp setback, before reaching a decision to add further to long-cost items. As a matter of protection it seems that once an upturn develops all holdings should have the benefit of stop loss orders under recent lows. For if they are broken a return to May lows is likely.

Traders Have Few Convictions About Trend of Market

By WALL ST. SPECTATOR

Traders say the grain market is in surprisingly good shape despite its steady rise.

They find little evidence of any top-heavy speculative positions, and attribute it to the fact the public isn't in grains to any greater extent than in stocks. The Washington boys are picking up the rise futures, attributed to the per world prospects for this crop. Some Wall Streeters also are looking over the Liverpool situation, where wheat stocks are the lowest of any major market and, despite some activity there as soon as the Argentine stops pressing its grain for sale.

SLOWDOWN IS NOTICED IN STEEL TRADE

Price Unsettlement Is Big Factor in Curbing Action

By Associated Press

New York July 18—In spite of a 3 per cent increase in production to 35 per cent of capacity, said the Weekly Iron Age Review today, unsettlement in the steel industry has become more marked. Reasons for this accentuate the belief it could go to the Review editor that the situation and economic prospect in the finished steel industry

"Marked interest is still focused toward the future," continued the review, "even though orders for sheets and tin plate are holding up better than had been anticipated. The automobile industry has placed some business in the last week and is expected to have entered its entire requirements for the present models by the end of the month.

"Recent price reductions and the current uncertainty regarding the maintenance of present levels offer little incentive to immediate purchases.

"Price revisions during the last three weeks have offered conclusive proof of the fact that the code is not a price fixing medium. Both of the recent reductions in sheets were filed with the industry's code authority by individual mills and came as complete surprises to other producers.

"They were met with reluctance in most instances and indicate very clearly that the code would be powerless to prevent a rapid decline in prices if any one producer felt that prospective tonnage might be encouraged.

"The general strike at San Francisco is having little immediate effect upon the steel industry except as it influences business sentiment generally."

STOCKS HIGHER WITH VOLUME INCREASED

New York, July 18—The stock market took on a better appearance today as the news from the west coast indicated that strike tension was easing. This led to short covering in the list resulting in gains running to more than a point in some instances.

Considerable improvement was evident in the railroad shares which have been bearing the brunt of the recent selling. New York Central, Lackawanna, Southern Railway and other recent weak spots advanced up to a point.

Chemical stocks were particularly strong under the leadership of duPont, which jumped nearly 2 points.

Liquor shares, another group which had been characterized by weakness in recent sessions, also appeared to be meeting with a better grade of support today and fractional gains were evident. American Commercial Alcohol was an exception losing more than half point on a comparatively large turnover.

United States Steel and other industrial stocks advanced easily in the early trading. General motors and Chrysler were leaders in the motor shares' recovery.

Utilities were quiet and generally firm in unison with the rest of the list. Aviations, oils and specialties were generally steady.

Commodity markets were strong with Wheat and Cotton at new highs on the movement.

Sales to 11 p. m. approximated 120,000 shares.

Moderately higher prices ruled in the first hour with trading at a faster pace than in previous sessions of the week. Gains were limited generally to a point range. Atchison was a point higher. Philip Morris was better than a point higher.

Du Pont was around 2 points higher. U. S. Steel was fractionally higher. Crosley Radio was a point above its last closing price. Bethlehem Steel was a major fraction higher.

Columbia Pictures advanced a point. Case Threshing was around a point above its last closing price. U. S. Smelting showed a gain of almost 2 points.

Mid-week trade statistics drew some attention away from labor developments.

Steel and electric power figures, however, indicated little change in trends, confirming the general impression that business now is tending to mark time pending the advent of seasonable stimulus to quicken the pace.

Iron Age estimated steel operations were at 28 per cent of capacity, up 1 point from last week. Increasing uncertainty regarding the labor situation and renewed unsettlement in the finished steel price structure, according to the magazine, have accentuated seasonal inactivity.

"Recent price reductions and the current uncertainty regarding the maintenance of present levels offer little incentive to immediate purchases," it commented.

Electric power output last week recovered sharply from the decline in the preceding week, but the total was slightly under that of the same period last year, according to figures of the Edison Electric Institute. In the preceding week, output was 1.1 per cent ahead of last year.

The influence of further advances in cotton and grains was evident in daily commodity price indices. The Moody index of spot commodity price has risen to a ne wpeak for the year at 111.

Arally in German marks took place in foreign exchange trading. The dollar was firm against other European currencies, however. The British pound opened off ⅛ of a cent at $5.03⅞. French francs were off .00½ of a cent at 6.60 cents.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Josephthal & Co.—While we feel that stocks may be held at current prices we would not advise adding to commitments until the market has demonstrated its ability to hold around current levels.

Livingston & Co.—We are still inclined to the view that the very fact that the action of the market has been better than sentiment for some weeks indicates that some upward trend will eventually develop out of this present long dull spell.

Soucy, Swartswelter & Co.—With the prompt smothering of the attempt at a technical rally yesterday morning, the market appears to be on the verge of another sinking spell. A prompt settlement of the San Francisco general strike would probably save the situation at least temporarily.

Union Pacific Earnings Are Sharply Higher

New York, July 18—Union Pacific System covered its fixed charges about 1.51 times in May and 1.70 times for the first five months, it is disclosed by consolidation of income accounts of the four operating companies after elimination of inter-company items. This compares with coverage of 1.82 times in May, 1933, and 1.17 times for first five months last year.

Earnings a common share in the first five months are estimated to have amounted to around $1.29, against 20 cents a share in the like 1933 period.

Total income in May is placed at $1,948,641, against $2,123,-816 in like 1933 month, while fixed charges amounted to $1,289,-103 this year, against $1,313,176 in 1933, leaving $659,537 surplus after taxes and charges, against $80,640.

Total income for first five months is placed at $10,973,728, against $7,676,003. Fixed charges for the period are estimated to have totaled $6,448,48, against $6,582,111 last year. Net income after all charges is estimated to have been $4,525,310, against $1,093,892.

For first six months of 1933 the system reported net income after preferred dividends of $2.14 a common share. The report for the first half of 1934 probably will appear around the end of this month. Other income of U. P. in June, last year, jumped almost $5,000,000 over the preceding month and was mainly accountable for the showing for the period. Usually the first half of the year is the road's poorer.

For the full year 1933, Union Pacific System covered its fixed charges 2.42 times, against 2.30 times in 1932. Even though the system's earnings have declined sharply the last five years, fiexd charges have always been covered by substantial margin. This has been accomplished not only through dividends received from subsidiary companies and investments in those years in which rail operations declined, but by a policy of constantly reducing funded debt.

At the end of 1933 total funded debt amounted to $670,027,-815, against $683,952,620 at the close of 1929. In 1929 alone funded debt was reduced by $47,239,795. Also during this five-year period, while the road has maintained its common dividend payments, current assets have remained practically unchanged, with cash increasing. At the end of last year current assets totalled $45,267,141, against $43,958,028 at the close of 1929.

Cash at the end of last year totalled $20,313,026, while five years previously it amounted to $9,313,777, although there was $6,500,000 in money lent on demand and in deposits. The item in current assets which dropped during the period was materials and supplies, which declined around $3,000,000.

Other startling changes in the balance sheet the past five years are: Increase of $12,000,000 in investment in road and equipment, decrease of $5,000,000 in investment in affiliated companies; decline of $18,000,000 in investment in other companies; decrease of $10,000,000 in U. S. government securities, and a decline of $20,000,000 in total investment. Total assets dropped about $20,000,000 between 1929 and 1933.

Current laibilities have been greatly decreased all during these years of depression. At the end of 1933 current liabilities amounted to $18,017,014, more than $7,000,000 less than at the end of 1929. Deferred liabilities also decreased by $7,000,000 during this time, while reserve for depreciation increased about $21,000,000. Profit and loss balance at the close of last year, amounting to $257,591,121, had decreased $7,000,000 since the end of 1929.

General Electric Report Is Issued

Sales billed by General Electric Co. during the first six months of 1934 amounted to $80,983,093 compared with $61,773,414 during the corresponding period last year, an increase of 31 per cent.

Profit available for common stock for the second quarter of 1934 was $4,253,596, equivalent to 15 cents per share, or substantially the same as the quarterly dividend of 15 cents per share to be paid on July 25 to approximately 192,000 stockholders, compared with 10 cents per share paid to 184,000 stockholders a year ago.

Profit available for common stock for the first six months of this year was $8,175,557 compared with $4,666,081 for the first six months of last year. This profit is equivalent to 28 cents per share for the first six months of 1934, and 16 cents per share for the first six months of 1933, on 28,845,927 shares outstanding in both periods.

BOND MARKET HOLDS FIRM

By International News Service

New York, July 18—The bond market was somewhat firmer today in sympathy with stocks and also because of the more reassuring news from the San Francisco strike area.

High grade investment issues held around their best levels of the year and in some instances scored fractional gains. Chesapeake Corp. 5s of 1947 were up ⅛ at 105. Baltimore & Ohio 4s were unchanged at 102⅛, as were the B-M-T 6s at the same price.

Second grades also were improved with the Erie 5s of 1975 up ⅛ at 72⅛ and the St. Paul 5s of 1975 up an equal amount to 36.

United States Government issues showed a firmer tone following yesterday's reaction. Treasury 3s of 1955 gained 2-32 to 102.9, and the Treasury 3s of 1948 were up 1-32 to 102.8. The Treasury 3⅛s and the 4¼s were unchanged.

Foreign issues were quiet with Germans steady.

Commercial Paper Is Money Mart Feature

By Associated Press

New York, July 18—The sharp recovery in popularity of commercial paper in recent months, while other and newer forms of business accommodations have continued to languish, has been the single feature of an otherwise virtually paralyzed money market.

The volume of commercial paper outstanding at the end of June reached another new peak for the last three calendar years, climbing to $151,500,000. This represents a recovery of 150 per cent from the extreme low of $60,100,000 at the end of May.

In contrast, the volume of bankers' acceptances, the leading type of short term trade financing, has shrunk by some (?) in the same period and now totals less than $550,000,000. A few years ago the total was three times the present amount.

Commercial paper once was the favorite type of credit for handling the storage and movement of goods, but in the past decade acceptances have largely replaced it.

Now paper is used chiefly for financing inventories pending their sale in the markets, while acceptances constitute the form of credit for imports and exports and warehouse storage, as well as the movement of goods in foreign countries.

Bankers point out that the figures for a single type of commercial financing are hardly indicative of the state of trade. Much of the rise in commercial paper volume is believed due to the technical arrangement of rates and commissions which temporarily favors this type of accommodation.

Both acceptances and paper are selling at the lowest open market prices in history. Because of the sorter maturity and additional bank endorsements on the former, acceptance bills now sell at ⅛ of 1 per cent, against ¾ of 1 per cent for commercial paper. Both are prime investmets for banks.

The acceptance borrower, however, must pay a commission to his banw of 1½ per cent, in addition to the open market buying rate of 3-16 per cent, making the total cost of this operation 1 11-16 per cent.

The commercial paper dealer charges only ¼ of 1 per cent commission above the market rate, on the other hand, making the total cost to the borrower considerably cheaper. Usually, the commercial paper market rate is enough above the bill rate to give the latter the advantage on the total credit cost.

Some local banks have favored a reduction in the commission on acceptance bills, but it is feared that a breach in the agreement which fixed this rate might result in cut-throat competition.

Instead, many institutions have resorted to over-the-counter business loans at 1¼ or 1½ per cent to satisfy customers who ordinarily would employ acceptance credits. Estimates place the total of loans now replacing acceptances as high as $150,000,000.

It is expected that when market rates rise to restore to acceptances their traditional position as the cheapest type of financing for shipping or storing goods, bills will again tend to replace commercial paper and direct counter loans.

An interesting tour of inspection of Charlestown Navy Yard, crowned by a visit aboard the frigate Constitution, and aboard the super-dreadnaught, U. S. S. Colorado, one of the three mighty-est and most modern battleships of the American fleet, are on the program in the observance of "Navy Day" for Junior Birdmen tomorrow afternoon.

Unusual honors are to be bestowed on members of the organization through the personal greetings of Captain H. E. Cook —representing the Rear Admiral H. H. Hough, commandant of the yard—and Lieut. Butler, in charge of the Constitution, and Commander T. C. Kinkaid, executive officer of the Colorado.

Rear Admiral Hough

Special guides for the occasion have been picked Birdmen will provide detailed information on ship construction and other activities at the yard, point out destroyers and other craft tied up at the piers, sketch the history of the world-famous Constitution and explain the many interesting facts connected with the Colorado, oftentimes called "The Queen o' the American Navy."

Junior Birdmen and Junior Birdwomen are to assemble promptly at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the main gate of the Navy Yard at Water and Wapping streets, Charlestown. There they will be welcomed by Captain Cook.

Then they will form in groups, with squadron commanders in the lead, and walk under the direction of naval officers and guides to various places of interest, including the Constitution. At each point they will walk up the gangplank of the Colorado, to be greeted by Commander Kinkaid and will form into groups to be shown over the ship.

WINGS NECESSARY

This event for Junior Birdmen is made possible through the co-operation of Rear Admiral Hough and several other naval officers. It is, of course, a special invitation to Junior Birdmen and it will be necessary for all members to wear their wings in order to join the reviewing party.

Adults will be admitted only in case they accompany a member of the organization. This means all Junior Birdmen and Junior Birdwomen can bring their friends and relatives.

If you are between 10 and 21 years old and haven't joined the Junior Birdmen and want to see the Constitution and the Colorado, you ought to send in your application immediately.

Junior Birdwomen will be particularly interested in joining the sightseers since it is rare when girls and women get the opportunity to inspect a battleship at close range. Special attention will be given to them on this occasion and every Junior Birdwoman, with her family and friends, is urged to attend.

Nothing like this opportunity will probably be offered to Junior Birdmen again this year. The Colorado and another dreadnought, the Tennessee will leave the yard Monday and steam to Newport, R. I., and from there to Hampton Roads.

Those members who have never been aboard a battleship and seen the huge turrets and guns, the activities of sailors at work and at rest, the shine of brass and the spotlessness of decks, will gain impressions they will never forget.

They will look at how airplanes are carried on these super - dreadnoughts and how they are catapulted into the air. They'll learn heavily for establishing themselves through exploiting a theme song, they can't expect to drop it overnight and not have it missed. More or less like shaving off a moustache and adjusting one's self to store teeth. The latter two examples are mentioned by the writer only through hearsay and observation, not any personal experience.

Capt. H. E. Cook

Scores of loyal "colyum" subscribers are asking what has become of "Joe and Bateese" the French-Canadian funmakers? The popular dialect demons have been having lots of controversial sponsor discussions lately and their activity is being interrupted until things take a turn one way or another. However, the WBZ-WBZA head men now say they will positively be on the evening Sunday night schedule at 10:15 p. m.

HOLLYWOOD BURLESQUE TO FEATURE TONIGHT'S BROADCASTS

Fred Allen Will Poke Fun at Film City

By N. F. T.

Keeping his own face straight, which is an art in itself when indulging nonsense of the Fred Allen brand, that well-known comic comes out tonight (WEEI) with a 9 to 10 o'clock turn based on his personal observations of Hollywood, the great moving picture metropolis in California. It's the weekly "Hour of Smiles" setting.

More than a few of the screen celebs will be on hand for Broadway impersonation by members of the Fred Allen radio stock company. Jack Smart, Portland Hoffa, Ellen Stander and Irwin Delmore have been assigned to take care of the chimney. James Melton is again in Fred.

POPULAR PERSONALITY

Bruce Cabot, good looking young leading man of the movies, assumes the dramatic leading role opposite Adrienne Ames tonight (WBZ) when the mid-week "Love Story" program gets under way at 9:30 p. m.

There's a striking charity musicale coming through the New England air channels (WHDH) this evening from 8:45 and 9 p. m. Mata Roudin and William Williams are the vocal soloists taking part. George C. Krevson, prominent hotel executive of Magnolia, is slated to speak briefly on "Work of the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals" for which endowed institutions the air attention is designed to bolster interest.

Listeners who like the classics will no doubt wish to catch the new 60 minutes of Detroit Symphony Concert impressions (WNAC) from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight.

PARKER FENNELLY

Parker Fennelly . . . Young old man . . . Who went through many roles . . . In many places . . . Before discovering that his forte was depicting the oldsters he knew in his old home town . . . Which is Northeast Harbor . . . Way down East in Maine.

You know Parker as "Uncle Abner" . . . In "The Spellight Revue" . . . On the Columbia Network . . . And as "Uncle Dan'l" . . . In "Snow Village" . . . With Frank Crumit . . . The then evil doer over the National Broadcasting Company Network.

Parker was born Oct. 22, 1891 . . . At Northeast Harbor, of course . . . Which is a settlement of only 500 souls . . . And most of them then had whiskers . . . Just like Parker wears now in character . . . And no whiskers that way . . . Even if the more up-to-date residents of the harbor don't now.

Drama was always his long suit . . . Even in school . . . But he tagged at the end in algebra and things . . . And was much more interested in play acting . . . And in carrying the mail . . . At $2 a week . . . For summer visitors.

Then he decided Boston was the place to learn acting . . . And he enrolled in the Grand Flowers School . . . A cousin helping him out with the tuition fee . . . And Parker roaming around Boston . . . Peering into people's faces . . . And making notes on them.

With his diploma . . . He joined a Shakespearian company . . . Playing juveniles in the old standbys . . . Until Walter Hampden offered him a part . . . That of a country boy . . . It "Mr. Pitt." . . . And it was the turning point of his career . . . Half-way gave him another turning point.

PICKFORD SUIT EXPOSE HINTED

New York, July 18—Another step in Edward Hemmer's $250,000 breach of contract suit against Mary Pickford was taken here through a haze of intimations hinting that the life of the Pickford family.

Miss Pickford's attorneys appeared before Federal Judge William Bondy with a plea that Hemmer, self-styled manager of Amelita's sweetheart for many years, be prevented from testifying at the trial of the suit.

They contended that Hemmer's bill of particulars was inadequate, and this was admitted by Ralph Yatter, Hemmer's attorney, who said details were omitted because "they concern highly personal matters of Mary Pickford and her family."

U. S. Man Describes Attack by Turks

Istanbul, Turkey, July 18 (AP)—Professor Richard Carman Borden of New York University today told how Turkish soldiers had molested him and his wife Sunday when they wrecked a canoe trip through Turkey. The soldiers, after action by the United States embassy, were under arrest. Equipment they stole from the Bordens has been returned. Borden said:

"Soldiers with bayonets took all our money, $60, knocked me down, maltreated my wife, and kept us seven hours in a guard-room, threatening and not allowing us to communicate with our authorities."

Dizziest of Treaties

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

If you do not understand just why that famous Versailles Treaty started trouble, we will explain it until you are dizzy.

America wanted nothing. And got it. The nations who wanted something did not get what they wanted.

The victory was complicated because there were 15 or 20 winners. And most of the gang shootings occur when the bandits are dividing up the swag.

Instead of being a peace treaty, the Versailles document turned out to be a Sam Loyd puzzle. How can a man take a lion, a lamb and a wolf across a river in a boat without making more than one trip?

The answer is that he cannot. And that's why the Versailles Treaty will go down in history as the bone that did not knit.

Daniel J. Walsh, M. D.
Dear Doctor:

This is to certify that my son, Earl W. Hodgdon, at the age of 7 was pronounced by several doctors to have Tuberculosis and they gave little hope for him. I had you treat him for a few months and then his school called for a health certificate. He was examined at the Mass. General Hospital and he was pronounced free from all Tubercular symptoms and all diseased spots healed. Returned to school and has never had a return of his former trouble. He is now 32 years old, married and has two healthy children and is in the best of health; thanks to you. You may use this letter for publication in hope it will help others who suffer as my son suffered. Signed, Mrs. Anne L. Hodgdon, 275 Rock Island Road, Quincy, Mass.

San Francisco Strike Is Revolutionary Thrust by Communists

IF further evidence were needed—which unhappily it is not—that the San Francisco general strike is, in a significant measure, a fomented revolutionary thrust by the Communists, such evidence is supplied by an appeal in the Daily Worker, the central organ of the Communist party of the United States, a section of the Communist Internationale.

It is a call to all Communists in the United States to take the lead in spreading the strike of the San Francisco marine workers to every seaport in America.

Instead of regarding the San Francisco strike as a calamity, the Communist harpies hail it with glee and as an opportunity to be made the most of—an opportunity to wreak their hatred upon orderly society and the country, and to give unbridled vent to their passion for destruction.

The Daily Worker is well schooled in the technics of brawls and public commotion—or, as the "conservative" of the Tugwell brand might prefer to call it, the "revolutionary tactic."

NOT CONTENT with the fact that the Communists have achieved their primary objective in the actual precipitation of a general strike and that it is in full operation, the Daily Worker already charges the strikers' commie with bad faith and accuses it of having been reluctant from the first to the strike.

It warns the workers against the inevitable treachery they are destined to encounter on the part of their leaders, whom it accuses of going along with the strike only when they found they could not prevent it, and in order to be able better to stab it in the back at an opportune moment.

"Spread the marine strike to every port," is the cry of this Communist organ—whose seditious and traitorous agitation seems to enjoy a tolerance on the part of the country's present guardians that we are at a loss to account for.

The Communist instigators behind the scenes will be made to realize the gravity of bidding open defiance to the sense of justice and the common right of a great American community.

And—regrettable to be said—the legitimate rights of labor and the sympathy which every American feels with its decent demands will suffer a grievous set-back as a consequence of the nation-wide resentment now being engendered by the folly of labor's leadership.

ENGLAND gave the world, in 1926, a demonstration of what a great self-respecting community can do in the face of such a threat.

Men, women and student bodies volunteered for service. Food supplies were organized for distribution. A volunteer transport corps was formed. It included even women as truck drivers and was augmented by army and navy transport units. Everyone capable of driving an automobile was asked to enlist.

All transport means were thoroughly organized and there was no food shortage in any part of the country. Volunteers were trained to drive subway and trolley cars and buses.

As the general strike was proclaimed as an attack upon the Government, the Government therefore organized itself to overcome the strike.

Military guards were provided for the convoying of food. All food in transit was concentrated by authorities and distributed at cost. All monetary disputes were settled by Government authority.

On the Pacific coast it is not a struggle between the militia and the rioters of the San Francisco waterfront. It is a struggle between society and the forces that would disrupt society.

The Communist leaders who are at the bottom of this disorder, and its real source, should be spotted, identified and arraigned. Their evil counsels should be silenced. San Francisco and the State of California should be rid of their presence.

If this is not done, the State of California, despite its advantages and attractions, will be no more fit to live in than Russia under its present Communist domination.

THE FULLEST SUPPORT must be given to both the STATE AND MUNCIPAL AUTHORITIES in whatever they do to vindicate the rights of the public.

And both the State and municipal governments must give the fullest support to the decent and loyal elements in the community—for it is the latter, with their preponderance in numbers, weight and influence, who will determine the outcome.

It is the self-respecting and straight-thinking Americans of San Francisco who will prevail in this argument.

Lined up with them are all the latent forces of society and properly directed, these are irresistible!

This it is which foredooms a "general strike" to failure—failure which is inevitable!

History shows that such a strike has always collapsed.

FROM THE STRIKERS' STANDPOINT—IT IS SUICIDE!

Our Youngest Judge

There are many who will share in our satisfaction in news published that Judge John J. Burns has decided to accept important national duties.

It was natural that Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the new stock exchange regulatory commission should offer him the post of counsel.

Judge Burns at 30, three years ago, was the first graduate of Boston College to be chosen by the Governor for a Superior Court judgeship. Son of an "L" motorman, he advanced rapidly by diligent work. He left the seat of professor of law at Harvard to become our youngest judge.

Judge Burns presided at the trial of a major case involving a big stock market flotation. He is eminently fitted for the post accepted from Chairman Kennedy.

We Miss the Point

Many of us continue to miss a main point of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

This was to enable liquor sales, as in the older days, to provide us with revenue to ease the burdens of taxpayers.

The new revenues were intended to divert into the public treasuries the great sums that had been going to the bootleggers.

Now the point is evidently being missed in a fog of political misregulation. We find, for example, the Connecticut liquor control commission ruling that places selling beer can turn on radios only for baseball games and sermons.

No music is to be allowed.

Boston for years boasted one of the world's most famous orchestras playing where beer sales were permitted and popular.

Was Boston erring? We don't think so.

For Safer Streets

Before state officials took over regulating traffic control signals chaos reigned.

Motorists were faced by a conflicting set of rules, many of them of the Tom-fool variety, every time they crossed a town or city line. State control has removed at least one of the outstanding objections to traffic lights.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts blazed the way with another method for making the highways safer. This is "lining" the streets with paint.

"Lining" has stood the test of enough years to enable it to prove its real value. Automobilists nearly all heed the lines.

Towns and cities could take a leaf from the Bay State's books and make some of their own streets safer at small outlay.

Vandals In Arboretum

Of the Arnold Arboretum, Joseph Edgar Chamberlain said: "There is no lovelier spot in America."

No Bostonian is likely to disagree with him. The view from the Overlook toward the Blue Hill rivals anything in Switzerland.

Now this greatest collection of trees and shrubs is threatened by vandals. Harvard University, which generously opened the Arboretum to the public, is forced to appeal for funds for its protection.

Boston should show its appreciation. Let the public's policemen guard the beauty spot. A few are on duty there now. Increase their number. Keep an adequate force there at all times.

Each Case on Its Merits

Boston's tax rate must be kept down—but not at the cost of human want and suffering.

Mayor Mansfield therefore deserves full credit for the firm stand that he took with the Board of Overseers of the Public Welfare. These gentlemen had become too zealous. They wanted to send men to "flop houses." They wanted to reduce the aid being given to widowed mothers.

To them the mayor made two things clear:

No child must suffer.

Each case must be judged on its merits.

Olney Set the Course -:- By James T. Williams, Jr.

There is nothing new, nothing original about the strike of the longshoremen and stevedores along the waterfront of San Francisco, which has paralyzed for several months the shipping of that seaport.

Even the threat of a general strike aimed at the very heart of the city of San Francisco is not without precedent in American history. Boston faced that threat in September, 1919, during the Boston police strike.

LAW AND ORDER FIRST

There have been serious strikes in the past, and there will, doubtless, be serious strikes in the future. Under the American system of government there is ample authority to protect the public interest whenever and wherever public officials, municipal, state of Federal, have the courage to discharged unflinchingly the great responsibility which great authority involves.

Under the American system of government, the maintenance of law and order within a sovereign state is a state responsibility and the people look to the governor of the state to discharge that responsibility. Where the mayor of the city, be it Boston, Chicago, San Francisco or some other city or town, finds himself unable to cope with the situation, the governor can take over by declaring martial law.

The armed forces of the state are under the command of the governor. If they are insufficient, or for any reason are unable to maintain law and order and uphold the sovereignty of the state, the governor can appeal to the President of the United States for federal assistance and federal troops to put down the uprising, rebellion or revolution against the state's sovereignty.

But the President of the United States has his responsibility, entirely independent of any appeal for aid from the governor.

This responsibility has never been more clearly defined than Richard Olney defined it. Grover Cleveland's secretary of state defined it 40 years ago this month. The Pullman strike of 1894 was then in effect.

SWIFT ACTION TAKEN

On July 2 of that year word reached the White House that the temper of the strikers was such as to indicate that the use of federal troops might be necessary "if the United States mails are to be kept moving" and the injunction of a federal court against the officials of the striking railway union was to be respected.

President Cleveland took swift action. Additional federal troops were immediately ordered to Chicago to reinforce those already there. This action brought a protest from Governor Altgeld upon the ground that he had not requested federal assistance and therefore he asked the immediate withdrawal of the active troops throughout the state.

And a great American then in the White House, said Mr. Olney, speaking for a great Democratic President, in reply to the governor's protest:

"The soil of Illinois is the soil of the United States and, for all United States purposes, the United States is there with its court, its marshals, and its troops, not by license or comity, but as a right. The paramount duty of the President of the United States is to see that the laws of the United States are faithfully executed, and in the discharge of that duty he is not hampered or crippled by the necessity of consulting chief of police, mayor or even governor. In the present instance, nothing has been done and nothing ordered which the most captious critic can condemn as any invasion of state rights.

"The action of the National Executive has been simply and exclusively directed to the enforcement of the United States laws, the execution of the orders and processes of the United States courts and the prevention of any obstruction of the United States mails.

"The notion that the territory of any state is too sacred to permit the exercise thereon, by the United States government, of any of its legitimate functions never had any legal existence, and, as a rule of conduct, became practically extinct with the close of the Civil War."

ARRESTS ENDED STRIKE

The fact that Secretary Olney was speaking with presidential authority became convincingly clear to the nation and the world three days later, when President Cleveland issued his famous proclamation of July 8, 1894, announcing his employment of the military forces of the United States to enforce the execution of Federal laws, to protect Federal property and to remove obstructions to the Federal mails in the state of Illinois and the city of Chicago. This was quickly followed by a second proclamation which recognized the nation-wide extent of the rebellion against Federal authority.

When these proclamations were defied by the officials of the American Railway Union, who refused to "retire peaceably," they were arrested on July 10, and that ended the Pullman strike of 1894.

AS IN A DREAM

I thought I saw her yesterday.
Our long lost Marjorie;
And in the same old happy way
She waved her hand at me.

And though that last remembered year
Her cheeks were sickliedo'er,
Her eyes as radiant and clear,
Laughed at me as before.

Vanished was every line of pain.
It seemed almost that she
Had for that instant come again
To show her charms to me.

Perhaps 'twas but a memory
A fancy, some may say,
I know I thought that Marjorie
Smiled on me yesterday.

And beautiful and bright was she
Without one trace of pain—
Our laughing, lovely Marjorie
In radiant health again.

Human Side of the News; Darrow's Heart Kind

By Edwin C. Hill

Gnarled, knobby old Clarence Darrow exits and leaves the case with the jury.

His third and last epistle to the NRA, garnished with poison ivy and ballasted with bricks, may be his valedictory. Surely, he snapped his red suspenders after he had heaved his report through General Johnson's window! That's Darrow's gesture of finality. They can take it or leave it.

He seems to feel that way about his car, too. He thinks man is just a handful of clay, and there is no Valhalla for even such stout warriors as he. So with fame, too.

Those who hymn the great with psaltery and harp are themselves just little measuring worms—impelled to futile endeavors by some strang chemistration of sunlight. "All is vanity and a striving after wind."

AIDS THE DISTRESSED

One could assemble selections from the sayings and writings of Clarence Darrow in a malign testament of hate and despair. One could build others into an exalted humanitarian theme. There is a curious duality about Darrow which discloses blurred and shifting outlines as he steps into the wings.

In the opinion of this writer, he will not survive as a profound or original thinker, either as a penologist or a social philosopher, although there are multitudes who seem to regard him as such.

But there should be some kind of a Pantheon for a weary old man of 77, who will leave his home at night to aid any poor wretch in distress. He still does it—"unto the least of these."

It seemed to me that the debate in New York between Darrow and Chesterton several years ago was fairly incandescent in lighting up Clarence Darrow. The subject, as I recall it, was "Is the World Turning Back to Religion?"

In his youth in Kinsman, Ohio, Darrow used to sit around the livery stable or the feed store and talk religion with all comers. His attack on Chesterton was straight old line Bob Ingersoll. Savagely, he contended that the whale didn't swallow Jonah and Balaam's animal didn't talk.

FAMOUS REPORT

Chesterton ballooned out onto the stage, agitating his little fat arms as he adjusted his tiny pince-nez on his moon face.

"The difficulty of debating with Mr. Darrow," he gasped, as if greatly perturbed, "is that he insists on arguing seriously with a fundamentalist maiden aunt."

General Johnson might have dredged up that one. For, in spite of all the distorted pictures of Clarence Darrow as a modernist and a radical philosopher, he stems from the "little America" of the Dave Siebern's Golden Eagle store, or Dan Donovan's lumber yard—where one was for or against the preacher or the banker, and the whale did, or didn't swallow Jonah.

While Charles Edward Russell may have ghosted a little Karl Marx into his report, Darrow himself knows little and cares nothing about fuzzy philosophies and large loose generalizations. "Workers of the world unite," leaves him cold. Anton Dubinski, stock yards mucker, getting a raw deal, gets him out of a bed, like a fireman sliding a brass pole.

As in Kinsman, Ohio, everything in his now larger cosmos is highly particularized and personalized. One little pants presser, side-swiped by the Blue Eagle, would stir Darrow to anger, unappeased by carloads of offsetting statistics.

Not a philosopher or critic of religion, why is he picked to debate with Chesterton, perhaps the greatest controversialist of modern times? Not an economist, why is he picked to lead the battle of individualism against collectivism at Washington? Not a scientist, why was he picked as the shining Apollyon to wrestle with the great Bryan on evolution, in Dayton, Tenn.?

Perhaps the classical phrase—"human, all too human" gives a clue. Darrow has the idiom, the mind, the speech of the old agrarian America—before it was bedeviled with machines and confounded with philosophies.

TALKS OUR WAY

Whatever is to be said, about science, religion or economics he can say it our way, in our language, wearing a sound $18 suit, which was sent up to him when he telephoned. He orders his clothes that way and forgets them.

If he shuts his eyes, he probably wouldn't know whether he was wearing blue or gray or brown. He knows his tailor is all right, and maybe that's why he puts so much spleen into his defense of the small businessman against NRA.

General Johnson in his "Dear Clarence" letter concedes that he is the greatest American trial lawyer, and perhaps he is. He doesn't drag in much law. But he knows how to benefit one of a jury rather than an outsider talking to them. "Human—all too human."

One may believe that he has been, decidedly "all too human" in some of the causes he has championed. But here is a salient American well worth appraisal in some more authoritative forum than this.

Did you ever notice that his coat pockets bag, with the flaps tucked in? They are apt to be full of scraps of poetry and doggerel and usually there is a tattered copy of one of those old drummer's joke books.

Darrow likes the poem about "My love works in a greenhouse." One may go far, knowing such abstractions as law, science and economics, but he may go even farther knowing the human heart.

Stars and Stripes

England again makes it plain that she has no intentions of paying us what she owes us and she wants us to give her credit for her bad intentions in the matter.

In a recent debate on "Civilization versus Hitler," civilization came out third.

Indiana woman who became a grandmother at 28 probably never will learn to be her age.

Rome people have so many ways of murdering the English language you are not surprised at the increase in crime.

We've discovered the man who'd rather work than eat. He's just had three square meals and wants to know where the next one is coming from.

Way to make money—the quicker the better!
